Mr. Curtis said the remarks of Mr. Butler required no reply, and in answer to Mr. Ferry stated that counsel did not propose to disprove of the received, but would show that the motion to discharge General Thomas was made only when his lawyers saw no hope of procuring a judicial interest and reduced market values. Every legitimate in-discharge General Thomas was made only when his lawyers saw no hope of procuring a judicial decision as to the constitutionality of the act.

The argument was continued by Messrs. Wilson and Evarts as to the admissibility of evidence concerning the intent of the President concerning the intent of the President.

The Chief Justice ruled that evidence to show that the President employed lawyers to obtain a decision of the constitutionality of the tenure act was admissible, in support of the denial of the first article, in accordance with the former vote of the Senate, and with the principles of law and right. Yeas and nays 29 to 21. So the evidence was admitted.

The President told witness that he desired to have proceedings instituted to test its constitutionality, and wished him to consult with Mr. Stanbery, who had been too busy to look into the matter. Adjutant-General Thomas, with the President, concluded it would be best to apply for a writ of habeas corpus after General Thomas should be committed by the Criminal Court, which course Mr. Stanbery approved.
