When I received an invitation from a private association of working members of the Press to dine with them to-day, I accepted that compliment in grateful remembrance of a calling that was once mine, and in loyal sympathy to-wards a brotherhood which in the spirit I have "The Menthy Press"—George William Curtis. very young man, 1 constantly refer my first suc-cess—[applause]—and, too, my sons will here-after testily for their father that he was always proud of that ladder by which he rose. [Re-newed applause.] If it were otherwise, I should have but a very poor and mean opinion of their father, which perhaps—upon the whole—I—have —not. [Great laughter.] Thus, gentlemen, under any circumstances, In this company would have been purceentionably zines which I purchased for the occasion was an oid monthly containing a story by a inem"unknown writer, known to us only by the quaint designation of "Boz." [Applause.] That story, I think, entitled "Delicate At-tentions," but in the present volume under number of the first journal with which my name was associated. [Applause.] "Pickwick" was then an other name, i selected to publish in the first number of the first journal with which my name was associated. [Applause.] "Pickwick" was then an other name, i selected to publish in the first there according to the strict rules of the place on that day, but by merely representing that he was an American gentleman of cultivated taste for art, who, finding himself on a certain Sunday, out-famous for its pictures, was refused admission that day, but by merely representing that he was an American gentleman on his travels, and had was associated. [Applause.] "Pickwick" was then an unchronicled, if not an uncreated cha-racter. [Applause.] "Sam Weller" had not was placed at his immediate disposal. [Great] then atisen to increase the mirth of the Anglo-Saxon race. [Laughter and applause.] I had not heard, as we have since, of the writer of those see the famous reading room of the British not heard, as we have since, of the writer of those sketches, whose carter I may thus claim, in some sort, to have commenced [great laughter], and the relation of admirer and admired has continued from that day to the present. I am one of not more than twenty of the present company who welcomed him on an occa-sion much like this, a quarter of a century ago in this counter, and week, and she had only three days there. Upon that lady's going, as she assured me, alone to the gate mey open as if by magic. [Laugh-ier, and sconter, and when Legme to yielt Europe

-not. [Great laughter.] Thus, gentlemen, under any circumstances, this company would have been unexceptionably interesting and agreeable to me: but whereas I supposed that, like the fairies' pavilion of the "Arabian Nights," it would be but a mere handful, I find it drawn out like the same pa-villos, capable of comprehending a multitude. So much the more proud am I of the honor of being your guest. For, you will readily believe so much the more proud am 1 of the honor of being your guest. For, you will readily believe that the more widely representative of the press in America my entertainers are, the more I must feel the good-will and kindly sentiments towards me of that vast institution. [Applause.] Gen-tlemen, so much of my voice has lately been heard ... in the land—[laughter]—and I have for upwards of four hard winter months so contended against what I have been sometimes contended against what I have been sometimes quite admiringly assured was a great American catarrh-[great laughter]--a visitation which I have throughout highly appreciated-[applause and laughter]--though I might have preferred to be naturalized by any other social or physical means-[laughter]--I say, gentlemen, so much be haturalized by any other social of physical means-[langhter]--I say, gentlemen, so much of my voice has lately been heard in the land that I might have been contented not to trouble you any further from my present standing-point, were it not a duty with which I henceforth charge not be the requirement [laughter]; either because the newspapers lacked capital of faith. Another thing I have to say will, perhaps,
