Ifrom the Cincinnatt Commercial, of April 24.]

At noon of yesterday, a fire broke out in the Ohio Female College, at College Hill, which speedlly destroyed the main building, a four-story brick, and the frame chapel adjacent thereto. The small frame buildings, occupied by some of young ladies, were all that were saved. The fiames were first communicated to the roof and the top story from a defective flue, and then, fanned by a high wind, spread speedlly to every part of the house, completely enwrapping it and destroying everything that remained within their reach, save stones and bricks. When the fire was discovered, the Board of Directors were in session, considering the appointment of a President of the College. The gentlemen present immediately united with the ladies in a determined effort to save property. It was evident that the building could not be saved as there were no fire engines near, and not enough men to affect the flumes with buckets of water. So every possible effort was put forth.

The Impeachment Triat.

Washington, April 27.—Mr. Williams then took the floor, and after speaking of the august character of the tribunal, and the intense interest which is felt in the issue all over the country, said: The entire people are awaiting with anxiety the verdict, which is either to send thrills of joy to an afflicted land, or to rack it anew with threats of anarchy and despair.

He proceeded to state that the matter now presented for the decision of the Senate was not a quarrel between two officers, but an issue between the Executive and the American people. He, too, would ask, Whois Andrew Johnson? and would answer the question in a different manner from the President's counsel. He then intimated that Johnson's opposition to secession in the Senate was, perhaps, prompted by a doubt whether the step was advisable at that particular time; but however that might be; he would consider him as he is now sud has been since he came into power.

Mr. Williams held that the master key to all his conduct, as President, was a desire to favor and publold traitors, and to force the rebel States into gentleman, and was universally respected .- .V.
