matter in hand and made short work of it by ruling them out. Some of the Bryno Committee, after reaching Suffolk, not having the fear of that luminary before their eyes, held a meeting and appointed delegates to the Convention, who were duly admitted.

After the meeting was called to order, Colonel Burke took the stand and proceeded to make a speech, advocating, in strong terms, the rights of the negroes to vote. He was followed by S. H. Chandler, Esq., District Attorney of Norfolk, whose remarks were principally confined to a defence of the new constitution.

Colonel Platt, of Petersburg, another aspirant for Congressional honors, closed in a speech in which he dwelt on his love for the colored race, the many favors he had rendered them in days gone by, and, lastly, his valuable services readered to the country at large during the late war.

The ballot was then called for, which resulted as follows: Chandler, 11; Burke, 9; Platt, 8; Clevaler and the manufamits and proceeding and the manufamits and proceeding the morning:
