bright spring dresses 'wreathe round their blooming tring." Through the open doors floats in the balmy air of one of the sweetest spring days that ever wooed the blossoms. Altogether, days that ever wooed the blossoms. Altogether, the assemblage might be mistaken for a quiet, well-conducted congregation, and yet the eyes of the world are on that Chamber. The great trial of the Mineteenth Century is being enacted there.

The trial william of the Ropublic are weathers. The loyal millions of the Republic are watching, and waiting, and holding their breath to hear— the eatables would be backed up again and nd waiting, and holding their breath to hear—the eatables would be packed up again and or who does not realize that this is the last scene put back in the wagons, the liquor would be for who does not realize that this is the last scene of the solemn drams of the mighty struggle between Liberty and Oppression, and not the merconviction of a guilty President.

The Court in session, General Butler's loud, rasping voice breaks the stillness; cutting, stinging, baffling the opposition, as only Butler can. Look at him—fat, bald-headed, cross-cyed; a sort of natural antithesis, and anything but prepossessing. Nature gave him plenty of body, but stinted him in limbs; plenty of head, but flattened in front and pushed too far back. One small gray eve fur-signifed, the other requiring his manueye far-sighted, the other requiring his manuscript to be held within an inch of his nose. Ugly, sending them fluttering away on the wind for ungraceful, belligerent "Uncle Ben," without conscience, without modesty, but magnificently endowed with intellect, he stands there to-day the squares of gilt paper, and whatever virtue dowed with intellect, he stands there to-day the prominent man of the impeachment.

Near him, on the left, in an easy chair, sits "The Great Commoner." Imagine him as I see him now, wasted, cadaverous, worn-out in body, his deep-set eyes shining under his square mas is the proof of the whole argument. All the Celestials come and go in good as good and substance of the whole argument. All honor to Thaddeus Stevens! Pennsylvania's Spartan-like statesman.

Squares of gilt paper, and whatever virtue they may possess will be largely shared by the occupants of the Potter's Field of our own race, whose graves are strewn with them as the grounds in a forest is strewn with autumn leaves. The visitors would then walk around for a short time, chat, laugh and exchange congratulations with their living friends, and then ride away to the city, apparently in the best of humor with themselves and the rest of mankind. All the Celestials come and go in carriages, the rich merchants in the costliest hacks to be hired at the Plaza, and the poorer classes in humble style, but all in vehicles of the worker of the statesman.

Why, who is this, floundering round on the flouring making a speech of no particular bearing whatever. All, it is Judge Nelson, for the defence.

Grossly flattering the Chief Justice, contradicting the contradiction that contradiction the contradiction that contradiction that contradiction the contradiction that contradiction the contradiction that contradiction the contradiction that contradiction the contradiction that contradiction that contradiction the contradiction that contr

The Floren prowess Godfrey de Bouillon presented him with three small fragments of film, chipped from the Holy Bepulchre. Brought to Florence, these were carefully preserved in a golden pyx, and since then, on every succeeding Saturday, in Passion week, a spark has been struck from them to light the altar candles in the cathedata.

from them to light the altar candles in the cathedral. A lofty car, or rather a tower upon wheels, hung with fireworks, and around the basement of which are old paintings, dim and blackened by time, of episodes in Pazzl's campaigns, is stationed opposite the chief entrance to that magnificent church, and is connected with the choir by a tightly-strained rope passed up the centre aisle at about seven feet from the ground. At a central moment of the mass a match is applied aisle at about seven feet from the ground. At a certain moment of the mass a match is applied to a tin dove, which is a sort of firework, and which flies along the rope, spitting out showers of sparks as it passes a little above the heads of the congregation, until, on reaching the car, it ignites the wheels and squibs and crackers fixed about it, and there is forthwith a prodigious cracking and fizzing, attended by much smoke, but little wisible fire for all this occurs about noon, and and there is forthwith a prodigious crackling and fizzing, attended by much smoke, but little visible fire, for all this occurs about noon, and nothing is tamer than fireworks in broad daylight. The explosion at an end, four great white oxen, wrenthed and shaded with branches, as in Leopold Robert's pictures, are yoked to the tower, which they drag off, slow and tottering, to the Palazzo Pazzi in a neighboring street, where more fireworks are let off, and the performance is over for the year. It appears that its cost used to be borne by the Pazzi family until a very recent date, when department of the product of t horses, besides seriously injuring three picadores, one of whom, I fear, will hardly recover. One one of whom, I tear, will hardly recover. One bull alone killed six horses, and on one occasion lifted both horse and rider at least three feet from the ground, tossing them one over the other—a dreadful sight. Indeed the treatment of the horses is the most cruel and—I hope I may be forgiven for saying it—the only disagreeable part of the affair, for all the rest is an exhibition of skill and courage which it is impossible not to admire dreadful sight. Indeed the treatment of the horses is the most cruci and—I hope I may be forgiven for saying it—the only disagreeable part of the affair, for all the rest is an exhibition of skill and courage which it is impossible not to admire. But it is astonishing how soon one gets accustomed to blood. When I saw the first horse gored and rolled over on to his rider, it really made me feel quite ill, and when a second was second was the second was the first horse to the second was the first horse to the roll of t my seat; but the third produced very little effect upon me at all, and I looked at the rest as calmly as my neighbors, who only recognized such incidents by cries of 'Bravo toro,' and shouts for music in his honor. Cuchares, the chief cepada, long considered the first in all Spain, is now old, and was visited with much disapproval for what
