Minister to France, and living in the neighbor hood of the Arch of Triumph of the Star at Paris, within a few minutes time from his great predecessor's residence at Passy, Mr. Bigdow formed the acquaintance of Mons. P. de Senermont, a collateral descendant of le Voillard, the Mayor of Passy at the time of Franklin's signar theory. This gentleman, aware of the scholarly profile whom I was stongly recording any profile tief of the Minister, committed to his hands a parcel consisting of two or three items: a book of faded manuscript, which was nothing less than the original manuscript of Franklin, as presented by him to his old friend, the Mayor of Passy, at he original manuscript of Franklin as presented by him to his old friend, the Mayor of Passy; at he original manuscript of Franklin, as presented by him to his old friend, the Mayor of Passy; at he original manuscript of Franklin, as presented by him to his old friend, the Mayor of Passy; at he original manuscript of Franklin, as presented by him to his old friend, the Mayor of Passy; at he original manuscript of Franklin, as presented by him to his old friend, the Mayor of Passy; at he original manuscript of Franklin, as presented by him to his old friend, the Mayor of Passy; at he original manuscript of Franklin, as presented by him to his old friend, the Mayor of Passy; at he original manuscript of Franklin, as presented by him to his old friend, the Mayor of Passy; at he original manuscript of Franklin, as presented by him to his old friend, the Mayor of Passy; at he original manuscript of Franklin, as presented by him to his old friend, the Mayor of Passy; at he original manuscript of Franklin, as presented by him to his old friend, the Mayor of Passy; at he original manuscript of Franklin, as presented by him to his old friend, the Mayor of Passy; at he original manuscript of Franklin, as presented by him to his old friend, the Mayor of Passy; at he original manuscript of Franklin, as presented by the interest to not one of the manuscript of the first ti

Franklin died 1790. The earliest issue of the auto-lography was in French, in 1791—the acquisition of the MS. by the translation of this into English was published in 1793, being the first copy issued in our language. This translated translation was not only the sole English version in print for a quarter of a century, but continues to this day to be republished by some of the largest houses, not only in Europe but in America, under the limpession that it is both genuine and complete. Twenty-seven years after the philosopher's death his grandson, William Temple Franklin, publishes the 1817 edition, heretofore unimpeached as the standard authority. Mr. EDNUMB favored its reference to the committee in the regular way. He approved the Constitution, but thought a bad precedent should not be established; besides, Republican Benators should not commit themselves to action which would render them able to suspiciou.

Mr. Buckalew, of Pennsylvania, raised the same MI. BUCKALEW, OI PENNSYMMIA, raised the same points, as to whether the Constitution was legally ratified, that were made in the House, quoting from the report of General Gillem.

Mr. SHERMAN replied, citing the report of the officer sent to investigate the election, to the effect that no frauds had been shown on the part of the registers.

no frauds had been shown on the part of the registers.

Mr. Morron, of Indiana, advocated a postponement until Monday, saying that the arguments of the Senators from Maryland and Connecticut indicated what use would be made by its opponents of van attempt to pass it to day. He was fore there was no intention to take advantage of the passage of the bill, but he would move an adjournment until Saturday.

Mr. Harlan pointed out that the addition of two Senators would leave the same number of votes as at present, inteteen, effectual for acquittal; and would herefore operate adversely to the friends of conviction.

After further debate, Mr. Trumbull pledged the addicary Committee to an early consideration of the bill, and

On motion of Mr. Johnson, it was referred to them.
