THEATRES, Etc.

BARTON HILL, AT THE ARCH.-There can be out one opinion among intelligent critics as to the merit of the play in which Mr. Barton Hill made his appearance at the Arch Street Theatre last night. It is decidedly the best that Mrs. brew has produced for many months. It is entitled A Wife Well Won; or, My Grandfather's Legacy, and was written, we believe, by Mr. Falconer. The other dramas of this author, which have been represented in this city. Falconer. The other dramas of this author, which have been represented in this city, have not possessed any very great degree of excellence, and as expectation did not run very high last evening, the gratification of the audience was even greater than it otherwise would have been. The plot is laid amid the exciting scenes of the French Revolution, but there is a total absence of those melodermatic features. is a total absence of those melo-dramatic features which seem naturally incident to a representation of that period. Neither is there any horror, any crime, or any cold-blooded villany of the sensa-tional kind. The conception of the plot is inge-nious and original; it is developed with artistic with a quick succession of natural but very dramatic incidents, and with a dialogue that sparkles with wit and gentle humor. The play gains brilliancy from the contrast with the wretched dramas which have been presented upon the Arch Street stage, and the stage of our other theatres for so long a period, and in heartly commending it to the public, we assure intelligent play-goers that they can witness its performance without that feeling of disgust which they have experienced hitherto in the presence of the degraded drama.

A Wife Well Won was admirably cast last evening, and all of the players did their best. Mrs. Drewas "Marguerite" had ample opportunity to display her fine powers to the greatest advantage, and she gave an artistic interpretation of the part. Mr. Barton Hill in the character of "Albert" played with all of his old power, and although upon occasions he seemed not thoroughly familiar with the text, his rendition as a whole was very fine and was for his between whole was very fine, and won for him hearty applause. Mr. Craig's versatility found new expression in the part of "Alexandre." His conception of the character was original and excellent, and he gave it with an effect that made the "Republican" more entertaining than he would have been in the hands of most actor. Mr. Fresly, where in the hands of most actors. Mr. Everly, whose misfortune it is always to be cast to unpleasant parts, played last night with great power, and despite the disagreeable character of "Goulard," contrived to make a decidedly favorable impressional trailings to the contributions to the contributions of the sion upon intelligent spectators. The other members of the company also deserve warm praise. The play will be repeated this evening, and we hope the house will be crowded, as it certainly should be.

COAL.—Mr. W. W. He is now prepared, at his yard on Ninth street, below Girard avenue, and at his branch office, corner of Sixth and Spring Garden streets, to offer to the public advantages in quality and price which cannot be procured elsewhere. Those who contemplate purchasing their yearly supply of coal will serve their own interests by calling upon him now. Indeed every one should make it a point to lay in a stock at this season of the year. The saving in price will more than compensate for the outlay, for now that the winter's demand is over prices have touched bottom, and will remain depressed but for a short time.
