Ferilous Balloon Ascension. One dull day in autumn, just after noon, a Une many is at the foot of Cleats Note the sign at the foot of Cleats One dull day in autumn, just after noon, a balloon rose into the air at the foot of Cleets Hills, on the western edge of the great central plain of England. It was inflated with the lightest of gases which chemical skill could produce. It rose with amazing velocity. A mile up, and it entered a stratum of cloud more than 1,000 feet thick. Emerging from this, the sun shone brightly upon the air-ship; the sky overhead was of

During the siege of Queretaro he sold to these two generals a very large quantity of war material, delivered at San Luis, receiving the promise of the Government for immediate payment. The efforts of the Libe-rals were crowned with success through this timely aid, but payment has never been made, asd he has been engaged during the whole of the past year in importuning the Mexican officials for his just due, and at last a grateful Republic thus repays a favor rendered to ber cause in its diskest days. Escobedo and Trevino are within hailing distance when the best friend they ever had is thus outraged in the most diagraceful manner, and they have no words either of indig-nation or sympathy.
