EVENING BULLETIN.

Wednesday, June 3, 1868.

THE LEAGUE RESOLUTIONS.

The resolutions or declarations which have been set forth by the Union League, through its Committee of Fifty-six, represent the sentiments and purposes, not only of the Union League, but of the vast body of the Republican voters of Philadelphia. After a hearty endorsement of the nominations and the platform of the Chicago Convention, the address of the Committee takes up the subject of the municipal election for which candidates are to be nominated next week.

The Union League, in behalf of the Republican party of Philadelphia, emphatically declares that it will support none but such candidates as enjoy "the entire confidence of the community for integrity and competency." It declares that the offices in the gift of the people must be held as a sacred trust for the benefit of the whole people, and the interests of office-seekers. It declares that those who seek office instead of waiting for office to seek them are too vitiated those who are governed by "the very first to betray and abandon party and to forsake their pretended principles at the earliest blast of adversity which may result in their personal interest and emolument." And finally, it declares that if unfit candidates are presented to the people by the nominating conventions, and defeat should ensue at the October election, "the responsibility must and shall rest with those who were instrumental in forcing such nominations before the people."

Upon these broad principles, honorable in the highest degree to any party, the Union League has planted itself, and its organization will control the vastness of the Republican voters of this city, as its suggestions have always done. The propositions which are laid down are broad, general, and unobjectionable. The Republican voters of Philadelphia desire to maintain their control of the municipal government, not for the benefit of the few persons who may hold the offices, but because they know that the best interests of the city, the State and the country are promoted by preserving Philadelphia as a Republican city. They know that there are scores of men in their ranks thoroughly fitted to fill every office which they have to bestow, and they know that the best sentiment of the largest portion of the population prefer a Republican to a Democratic administration of our domestic affairs. They remember, for instance, what the police of Philadelphia was under Democratic rule, and they shrink from returning to its old abominations. They know that, with every department of the government filled with truly honest men, competent, public-spirited citizens, we shall have economy of expenditure blended with a proper encouragement of enterprise, and that Philadelphia will become the most model city of this continent. They know that these ends can only be reached by placing their best men in office, and they are determined to place no others there.

There are many offices to be filled, and there are probably many aspirants for each one. But those who eagerly seek office will do themselves and their party the best service by determining in advance whether their record or their qualifications will stand the simple principles of the Address of the Union League. If they do, their election in the Fall, if not nominated, is certain; and if not, their policy is to prevent their names from coming before the nominating Conventions, since it may be accepted as a settled fact that good nominations mean triumphant Fall, and inferior nominations mean nothing but defeat.

There is one phrase in the Address of the Union League of peculiar significance. The League declares that it holds these principles regarding municipal elections, "irrespective of any supposed influence on a subsequent national election." By this it is understood that the November election is not to be counted on to carry the October election, but that the municipal question must be settled on its own merits. Every Republican feels that with Grant and Colfax for leaders the great battle of November will be a great victory, whatever be the result of the October campaign. The League expresses this idea, evidently in reference to the common notion that popular candidates for the Presidential election ensure victory for any candidates who may be put up in October. This has often been the case in bygone days, but it does not hold good always, and there is less ground for relying upon it now than ever before. The entire Republican municipal ticket can be elected in October by a heavy majority, if it is such as can easily be put before the public—such candidates as single name not generally opposed by the community. And we believe that the Conventions which are to be created on next Tuesday, and to fulfil their responsible functions on the next day, will have a sufficient proportion of wise and disinterested delegates in them, to secure such nominations as will be hailed with satisfaction by the entire party, and inspire the Republican ranks with such an enthusiasm as will prove the precursor of a glorious success in the Fall.

THE THREATENED INVASION.

The Canadians are again intensely excited over the anticipation of another Fenian invasion, and the alarm certainly approaches a panic as nearly as is possible without producing general demoralization. The most elaborate preparations have been made to repel the raiders. The force of regulars has been largely increased and thousands of men belonging to the militia organizations have left their avocations to do military duty for an indefinite period in the grand army of the defenders. These scares have become chronic in the Dominion, and their constant recurrence has only excited ridicule in this country. But this time there really seems to be some good ground for alarm. There can be no doubt whatever that the Fenians are really making extensive preparations for a raid over the border with a larger force than they have ever before had. It is certain that quantities of arms, ammunition, provisions and miscellaneous material of war have been collected at Buffalo, St. Albans and other points upon the frontier, and that large bodies of men, controlled by well-known Fenian chiefs, are present at these places, and under some sort of discipline. These things are freely stated in the newspapers, and many of the details and particulars of the intended invasion are given. The Fenians openly declare that they are determined to make another dash upon Canada and give their ancient enemies in the militia another opportunity to taste the grim pleasures of gory war.

It does not require great sagacity to foretell the ultimate result of the movement. It will be a contest between a wild, undisciplined rabble, and a trained military force, numerically superior, fitted with all the appliances of modern warfare, and encouraged by the love of home fighting for their families and their homes. The Fenians will be beaten, and then there will be the old story of trials and impeachments, of intercessions by our Government, and of executions of the miserable dupes who are led into this folly by stupid fiction or the hope of plunder.

As far as we can learn, the authorities have taken no measures whatever to defeat the purpose of the outlaws who are making the arrangements for this raid. The Fenian leaders have not displayed remarkable sagacity in the concoction and execution of their schemes, but they have succeeded in cash from the pockets of their victims, they have proved themselves equally skilful with the ordinary swindlers who live upon their credulity. As military commanders, they have been complete failures. But they seem to have sufficient wisdom to select a season for their operations when they will be most likely to find the authorities disposed to wink at their iniquities. Nearly all of the Fenian raids have been undertaken at a time when the whole country was deeply interested in a political campaign, and when both parties, especially that in power, dared not protest against or interfere with their operations, for fear of losing votes. This is the present situation. The Democracy will need every man in the ranks next fall, and it is very certain that a prompt and powerful interference upon the northern border now, would cause a defection of very many Democratic born citizens who believe in the righteousness of the Fenian cause. This is one of the perplexities of the administration. Sooner or later it must oppose the movement, for it is a scandalous thing that we should permit war against a friendly power to be openly organized upon our soil. The excuse for the conduct of the Canadians during the rebellion, cannot be allowed. We protested against their behavior, and however sweet retaliation may be, we must be true to the principles we then professed. When the governments of two countries interfere, it will probably be after the invasion is an accomplished fact; when numbers of men have been slain on both sides, and when more votes have been secured for the galleys. Mr. Seward will then probably consider it to be his duty to write whining and humiliating letters to the Canadian government, asking that those raiders whose deliberate preparations he ignores, shall be pardoned.

The truth is that the American people are completely disgusted with the whole Fenian business, and they demand that this illegal warfare be stopped in its incipiency. The administration must as well face the music and do its duty first as last. What it loses in the votes of the "unwashed," it will gain in the respect of intelligent and law-abiding citizens. In defeat in the next election is already a foregone conclusion, and it will be much better for it to endeavor to atone for its past misdeeds, and go out of office bravely supporting the laws, than to shirk the responsibility, and in playing the coward, sink even lower in the estimation of respectable people.

CITY ITEMS OF PHILADELPHIA.

All who ride or drive on the outskirts of Philadelphia see, in every direction, long rows of substantial new brick dwellings going up rapidly. In the older parts of the city they also see inferior buildings torn down to make room for handsome new edifices. They see churches, public halls, factories, stores and other great structures of stone, marble or brick, rising as fast as the season and the supply of labor will permit. The statistics as to the number of public improvements are furnished monthly, and we learn that in the month of May, just finished, there were permits issued for the erection of nine hundred and six new buildings of all kinds, while one hundred and forty-four permits were granted for alterations.

During January and February, owing to the season, there were, of course, few improvements begun, only 76 permits for new buildings having been issued in those months. The building season proper, therefore, only began in March. But the total number of new buildings begun between the 1st of January and the 1st of June, 1868, was 1,715; the alterations were 497—in all 2,212 improvements during the first five months of the year, and these mostly included in the past three months. There is probably no city in the Union that gives evidence of such rapid expansion. Those who do not know where the improvements are of such a substantial and excellent character. It is safe to estimate that the new buildings erected in Philadelphia during the year 1868 will amount to not less than five thousand. These will accommodate about thirty thousand people, which is rather under than over the probable increase of the population. So that, in spite of the improvements, there is no probability that house-rents will decline.

What Funny Weather We Have Had!

Wet and cold, and chilly and raw,
The queerest weather we ever saw;
Cold and chilly, and raw and wet,
The roughest spring we've ever had yet;
Raw and chilly, and wet and cold,
Weather to make the young feel old:
Wet and cold, and raw and chilly,
And yet our juvenile youngster, Billy,
Says that he knows there is going to be spring,
For the tree-frog hops and the bobolinks sing,
And the leaves come out, and the flowers look gay,
And the whole creation seems to say,
Billy, boy! Billy, boy! I hate away,
You shall have a new suit of clothes to-day!

The National Board of Trade Convention.

FIRST DAY'S SESSION.

The National Board of Trade Convention convened this morning in the Foyer of the Academy of Music. Delegates were present from nearly every commercial city of the Union. The Foyer was decorated with American flags, and also with the coats of arms of each State. Many visitors were present, among whom were a considerable number of ladies. At eleven o'clock Mr. John Welsh took the chair, and called the Convention to order, and proceeded to deliver the following address of Welcome:

In June, 1866, the Board of Trade of this city issued the call which has led to the present meeting. That call was made in the belief that the time had arrived when the commercial bodies of the country should meet in council, and in which the early counsels of the nation then in the throes of revolution, and of the wisest that ever met. It was composed of men to whom all could look for counsel of the highest wisdom. They were statesmen in every sense of the word, and their counsels were followed with great success. The local boards are doing good practical work, but they are not a national organization, a more general diffusion of knowledge is needed, and the best means of having representatives from all parts of the land to meet in council, and to consult together for the general welfare. The Board of Trade of this city, Board, each receiving around a common centre. All the great States have a leading part to play in the great sphere, the Constitution of the country, and in which each can aid the other. Those who fail to with everyone we are all necessary to each other. When one suffers, all suffer. When one prospers, all prosper. We are all the several States are revolving around one
