distinguished speaker seemed to be in complete command of himself and completely master of the situation. Confidence as to the result, which no one doubted, gave him an air of self-confidence which gave weight to his remarks. He was followed by the right Hon. Gathorne Hardy on the part of the Government, who was vociferously hi-hi'd by the conservatives. "Good," said the gentleman adjoining me, "he'll give 'em a good one. He's a lively speaker." And so he proved to wisdom. It would be called in our country cute. It was well expressed and well declaimed. The speaker looked hardy by nature as well as by name.
