

CITY BULLETIN.

The New "Age" Building.—Messrs. Wolsch & Robb, the proprietors of The Age, have taken possession of their new establishment, Nos. 14 and 16 South Seventh street, which has been fitted up in elegant style.

The building is four stories in height, having a front of fine pressed brick. The exterior view presents a plain or plaster between the windows, resting upon the brown stone capitol of the counting-room front, and running up to the cornice, where it arches over the fourth story.

The basement is used as a press-room, and the dimensions are thirty-four by seventy feet. It has entrances from the front and rear, and is adapted to its purpose, care has been taken to provide for the comfort of the employees. The press, which was in use at the old building, is located close by the north wall, and near the seventh-street side, while the engine and rollers, which are new and of recent make, are built in the northwest corner of the basement. The floor of the room is nicely boarded.

The height of the basement from floor to ceiling is twelve feet, and is supported by heavy columns. All the appointments incident to the printing of the paper are contained in this department, including the folding tables, closets for the rollers, &c.

The counting room is upon the first floor, proper, seventeen by seventy feet in size, with a lofty ceiling; around the walls is placed a richly grained wainscoting, some of which is of the above this being black ornamented with that grain of novelties—black walnut hangings—while, with a lighter colored paper ingeniously selected, gives to the walls an elegant paneled appearance.

The counter of solid walnut, in keeping with the characteristic colors of the room; at the point where it starts from the floor to the office department; at the other end of the counter, there runs nearly to the center of the room and at a distance of nearly forty-three feet, is the book-keeper's desk, with all its array of drawers, cubicles and pigeon-holes. In the rear of this is the cashier's sanctum. In the rear of this again is the private office of the proprietors. This is separated from the other portion of the room by an ornamental black walnut partition, having apertures filled in with plate glass.

The Editorial Rooms are upon the third floor of the building, and together cover an area of about seven by seventy feet. They are divided into five rooms, in a manner that will lend the greatest degree of comfort and convenience to the editors and the members of the editorial staff. The editorial rooms will be furnished with comfortable, well lighted, and furnished with the essentials that are necessary to the convenience of the literary staff. The rooms are all connected, and the two center ones by means of a fine, carpeted drawing room. There are arrangements for files of exchanges, works of reference, &c., and other features.

The fourth floor is the composing room, and it is one of the finest in the city for ventilation and light. On the seventh street front there are six windows, on the north side, and on the south three, and in the rear three. The height of the room is fifteen feet. This is another advantage, and one that gives the apartment an imposing appearance. About the center of the room, and close to the northern wall, is partitioned off the foreman's apartment, which is provided with furniture and neatly carpeted. A portion of the western end of the room is partitioned off for the night editor, and the eastern end is also neatly furnished. In the remaining portions of the room, thirty stands for the compositors are erected, and have been located with reference to the use of the light admitted through the windows as above stated.

The building in its every department, from the composing room to the press room, is one of the most complete and useful uses of newspaper publication to be found.

THE LOTTI CASE.—The money refunded in the Lotti case, to which repeated reference has been made in the columns of the Times, was finally brought to a close yesterday afternoon. As will be seen by the Civil Court records, it was reported in another column, John A. Crabtree was brought before Judge Garvin on habeas corpus to inquire into the cause of his detention, and subsequently remained on the bench until the incident was shown to warrant his detention. At a later hour of the afternoon the prisoner was brought to the Tombs Police Court, in custody of Captain Jordan, of the Sixth Precinct. Miss Charlotte Crabtree was returned to her. Mr. Crabtree was at once released from dress and the affair terminated.—N. Y. Times.
