"The unknown horsemen then compelled Mr. Robertson to dismount, took his animal, put Dr. McAdams upon it, and hastened away in the direction of Long String Bridge, over Duck river, on the Nolensville pike. After the meeting with Mr. Robertson nothing more was heard of the party that night. About daylight on Tuesday, many citizens who had already heard of the outrage, started out in the hope of finding McAdams. Near the centre of the bridge was found heaped up a quantity of hair, identified as having belonged to Dr. McAdams. It had the appearance of having been shaved from his head.

"The search proved vain. It is supposed that, after suffering many indignities from his tormentors, he was thrown into the river and drowned. The citizens living near by strongly believed that this was the case, and determined to drag the river, hoping to recover his body. articulars of the Shooting of Detec-tive Cullen, and Arrest of the Penn-sylvania Robber, Garner-The following particulars are taken from the Montreal Herald, June 10th.
