Mr. Wulson admitted that it opens that question, but said he had found it open. The committee proposed to open it twenty millions; he proposed to open it twenty millions, he reproposed to the circulation, and he was in favor of free banking.

Mr. Conkling pronounced both schemes to be efforts to get inflation, and proceeded to say that we have the singular anomaly of the Secretary of the far the singular anomaly of the Secretary of the Treasury issuing bonds bearing six per cent., payable in coin-equivalent to eight per cent.—with an easy money market, and withgovernment securities maturing to be met, while all over the world the certainty of investments in United States stocks is established.

Mr. Williams urged the impolicy of raising the question when Congress has so much diversity of opinion on the question.

The first part of the amendment was lost without a division.

At the suggestion of Mr. Sherman, Mr. Wilson. Then withdrew the latter part.

Mr. Morbilla, of Vermont, moved to amend by adding at the end of the section the words " and on the issue of any increase of national circulation, provided for in this section, the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and required to permanently withdraw an equal amount of United States notes. He did not object to the increase of twenty millions, if an equal amount of United States notes can be withdrawn. If it was desired to progress more rapidly be was in favor of free banking. The increase of banking capital at the South was necessary for the purpose of moving their crops. If the withdrawal of United States notes was opposed because it bore no interest, he would say that there never will be a prospect of resumption with any other principle.

Mr. Connuck will be a prospect of resumption with any other principle.

Mr. Connuck tried to stop the debate, he work being made, he expressed the hope that the debate would expect that Government deposits in banks should be taxed 4 per cent.

he would say that there never will be a prospect of resumption with any other principle.

Mr. Conkling opposed Mr. Wilson's amendment as proposition to inflate the currency.

Mr. Thumbull thought this simply another proposition to borrow money, and put off the time of the desirable resumption of specie payment.

Mr. Drakks protested against the attempt of the New England States, aiready gorsed with circulation, to deny an increase to the West. He asserted that there is now in the country but $12 per capita, while in 1860 there was $15, and that less money was required then than now.

Mr. Wilson remarked that there is now $650,000,000 in the country, which is a larger proportion than before the war, and he asserted that the banking capital of New England has not increased, but diminished, since the beginning of the war. He thought the capital now in circulation is needed in the West. He would vote for the twenty million increase.

At half-past four o'clock, without further action, the Berate went into Executive session, and soon after adjourned. Beported for the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.
