of the Republican Invincibles was held last evening, weight was 155 pounds; Brown's something less.

On their appearance the spectators could hardly choose between the two for their favorite. So nearly alike were the men, so equal in their dextrous handling of the oars, that the people were chary of venturing their opinions or money upon any particular one. Shortly after two o'clock the contesting boats got into line, about one hundred yards below the Columbia bridge, and at ten minutes past that hour the word to go was given them. Off they went, to a splendid start, the epray dashing from the gleaming blades as the rival men, encouraged by the shouts of their friends, attree with rival men, encouraged by the shouts of their friends, attree with rival men, encouraged by the shouts of their friends, attree with rival men, encouraged by the shouts of their friends, attree with rival men, encouraged by the shouts of their friends, attree with rival men, encouraged by the shouts of their friends, attree with rival men, encouraged by the shouts of their friends, attree with rival men, encouraged by the shouts of their friends, attree with rival men, encouraged by the shouts of their friends, attree with rival men, encouraged by the shouts of their friends, attree with rival men, encouraged by the shouts of their friends, attree with rival men, encouraged by the shouts of their friends, attree with rival men, encouraged by the shouts of their friends, attree with rival men, encouraged by the shouts of their friends, attree with rival men, encouraged by the shouts of their friends, attree with rival men, encouraged by the shouts of their friends, attree with rival men, encouraged by the shouts of their friends, attree with rival men, encouraged by the shouts of their friends, attree with rival men, encouraged by the shouts of their friends, attree with rival men, encouraged by the shouts of the Republican Invincibles was held last eventing, col.
