ratter than relieve any of those Janus-faced men who stood by the Union till the last moment, and then went off to the rebels, and were with them still Mr. Stokes stated that a note of injury had beel sent to the Tennessee delegation, and that the replicition was that George W. Jones was a rebel; that he went into the rebellion and was connected with it and that if he had repented of it, they did not know it. Besidee, he did not know whether Mr. Jone wanted to be relieved or not. He made substantiall the same statement to the members of the committee

ing to be relieved of disabilities, he would be in fayor of relieving him.

Mr. MULLINS, of Tennessee, addressed the House for ten minutes in vehement denunciation of Democrats. His remarks caused much amusement to members on both sides. In speaking of Democrats in connection with the late rebellion, Mr. Mullins said: According to the official report they have run on for four long bloody years, they have strewn the South with human graves, and the loyal bones of the ment of the North are rotting upon the hills of the South without Christian burial to-day, and while they were thus running riot in blood and in triumph over human strife, and assailing the Stars and Stripes, and civil, political and religious governments, they were overtaken and trushed out, and state what—that we surrendered. We surrendered.

state what—that we surrendered. We surrendered that is not the term used. They said they submitted they never surrendered, only when they were captured by the military armies of the republic, that were for the perpetuation of the government of our fathers, and to perpetuate, the right of all beings to stand before the burning eye of God, accountable to Him who died for them that the will of man should be free.

before the burning eye of God, accountable to Him who died for them that the will of man should be free.

That is the power that brought them down; that power that stood here under the Stars and Stripes that waved over the bloody fields of 1776, and rode the storm against the British lion. [Laughter] It met the Southern Anak and negro god, and made it dow. The Democratic party was its figurehead, that had been revelling in blood, plundering the public Treasury of the United States, and beggared it; that ravaged the public arsenals, and carried away the arms, and captured the whole sea coast and every vessel in every harbor; and now, after doing that. "("Let us alone!") they say while we are pulling the apples from the tree; do not throw shones at us. ([Laughter.] "Jhat ist us alone.") We used some gestle words, and they only defied us and mocked at us how we come in council together, and take to our bosoms an old man called Abraham alaughter); aye, and he looked into that pit, and he saw a figure coming up with his garments dyed in blood. Who is that I see on the blockhouse, with the sword against the ranbow of hope and promise of the world—the Stars and Stripes. (Laughter.) It is death, riding under the eneign of the Democratic party of the South, in open war arainst human liberty and human rights. Then, O ! my, sou! I look down and wonder at them coming up as doves, holy, and never having stained their hands in blood. [Laughter] Mr. Buooks said he had intended to reply to the gentleman from Illinous (Mr. Farnsworth), but the intervention of the very evapent speech of the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Binghem) that if he did not look out for his laurels, he would soon find that in all matters of rhetoric and poetic imagery the star of Tennessee would outshine the honorable gentleman from Ohio. trying for three years to rescue them. If this were so, he asked the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Farnsworth) whether it were not better to postpone the bill for a few days, that the House might know more fully the importance of the measure.

Mr. Farnsworth said that that was true; those states could not organize unless this bill was passed. Mr. Broomall, of Pennsylvania, remarked trat he believed the bill was not understood by the House, and that a delay of a day or two would satisfy three fourths of the members of the House that it ought to pass. He therefore moved to postpone the consideration of the motion to reconsider till Monday next.

The motion was agreed to.

The House then proceeded to the business on the Speaker's table, and disposed thereof as follows:
