Twelve or Fifteen Skeletons Dug up-Relics and Curiosities. The Binghamton (N. Y.) Republican of June 18

says:
"The workmen employed in digging the trench for the water mains in North Water street, in this city, have, within the last day or so, exhumed portions of at least a dozen Indian skele numed portions of at least a dozen indian skell-tons—some very much decomposed and others remarkably well preserved. One skeleton was nearly perfect; the skull with the jaws and teeth being complete, as were also the other bones, including those of the hands and the feet. This skeleton was of unusual size, and indicated that the person, when living, must have been much larger than the average of mankind. The other bones were in various states of preservation, some being hard and strong, others rotten, after a short time crumbling by exposure to the atmosphere.

"Portions of several skulls of large size, thick and very strang, were found, with a considera-ble quantity of ribs and other small bones. The ribs comprised those of grown persons and children, as they varied in size from that of an adult to three or four inches in length. In one instance the ribs were still adhering to the

"In some of the graves relics of curious shape "In some of the graves relies of curious snape were found, consisting of wheels, stars and crescents cut out of very hard stone. These were well formed, and were probably used as charms. A flint arrow-head was found in one grave, and in another a sort of knife or chisel, wedge shaped, made of a very hard stone of a greenish color. This knife was evidently used in skinning animals, as its peculiar construction would make it more convenient for that purpose than any it more convenient for that purpose than any

"In another grave an earthen pot was found but it was impossible to get it out whole, so that but it was impossible to get it out whole, so that its exact shape could not be ascertained. The material of which this vessel is made evidently comprises two kinds of clay—one of a light drab color, the other very dark, almost black, in appearance. The vessel is three-eighths of an inch in thickness; the light-colored clay forming an outside coating, about the sixteenth of an inch thick. The dark-colored clay seems to be a set of converte—containing minute parinch thick. The dark-colored clay saems to be a sort of concrete—containing minute particles of a gravelly substance, and in general appearance resembles coal dust intermixed with pitch. The vessel is ornamented both outside and inside—the ornamentation consisting of small indentures, very distinct, and regular in size and position. Those on the inside run around the vessel, those on the outside up and down. On the top rim are indentations similar down. On the top rim are indentations similar to those on the sides. The vessel was round in shape, and must have been quite large. It is very probable that it contained food, and was buried with the Indian for the purpose of sus-taining him in his passage to the "happy hunt-

'In another grave the bones of an animal were found, but they were so decomposed as not to be recognizable. The lower jaws were quite perfect, and are of peculiar shape and construction. At the extreme point of the jaw is a very powerful tusk—extending about half an inch out of the jaw. This tusk fills a socket extending nearly the entire length of the jaw. Further back in the jaw are four teeth, resembling very much the double teeth in the human jaw. The class to

The class to which this animal belonged is not apparent, nor of course how it came to be in the grave; but as the Indians often buried with their dead whatever was much prized by the deceased, it is natural to suppose that this animal was a pet, and was interred with the person to whom it belonged.

"These skeletons were found about four feet beneath the surface on the 'second level' above beneath the surface, on the 'second level' above the Chenango river, and every one of them in a sitting posture, with their faces inclining east ward. The Measuring Worm. To the Editors of the Daily Evening Bulletin-GENTLEMEN: Permit me, through the columns of your useful journal, to suggest a remedy to the citizens of Philadelphia for getting rid of the disagreeable pests which infestthe trees along the sidewalks of our city, in the shape of a black (or measuring) worm, which not only destroy the beautiful shade trees, but are a great nuisance to every one happening to pass under them. There was a season, about twenty-five years ago, when the trees were attacked by large years ago, when the trees were attacked by large armies of catarpillars, so much so as to completely strip the trees, and rendering it exceedingly disagreeable to all pedestrians. It was at that time suggested in a communication through one of the daily journals, as a sure remedy for destroying them, to bore a hole about 6 or 7 feet from the pavement (below the branches), about a half inch in diameter, and 3½ or 4 inches deep, in a dewnward sharting direcbranches), about a half inch in diameter, and 3½ or 4 inches deep, in a downward slauting direction, then issert as much powdered sulphur as to nearly fill it, then plug the hole up tight. In a very few hours the sulphur works its way through the sap to the branches, thence into the foliagt, which becomes impregnated with it, rendering the leaves so very distasteful to the vermin that they desert the trees with all possible despatch and fall to the ground.

I witnessed the experiment at that time, and in a few hours afterwards saw the caterpillars, by thousands, dropping from the trees; the trees soon after assumed a healthy appearance, and put out in new leaf the same season. The idea occurred to me that if the experiment sucdiden occurred to me that if the experiment suc-ceeded so well in the destruction of the caterpil-lar, it would succeed in destroying this very obnoxious black worm.

For the first time this season I have seen a preen worm similar in form, it having made its ppearance in Germantown; which is making sad have on the shade trees and shrubbery. It will be well to take them—in time before they deposit their eggs for another season.

Mrs. Lincoln at Springfield, Ill.

[Correspondence of the Chicago Journal]

Springfield, Ill., June 19.—Mrs. Lincoln and her son "Tad" arrived in the city this morning, and are stopping at the Leland Hotel. Tad, in behalf of Mrs. Lincoln, to-day presented a magnificent cane to our esteemed fellow-citizen, Hon. Jesse K. Dubois. The historical interest attached to this glit makes it of inestimable value to the recipient. The cane is a California orange stick, finished with great beauty, and is surmounted by a broad gold plate, on which is inscribed:

"FROM ENONESS TO PRESIDENT LINCOLN,"

" FROM CONNESS TO PRESIDENT LINCOLN." "FROM MRS. LINCOLN TO JESSE K. DUROIS."
The cane was presented by Broderick to Conness at the time in California when it was all a ness at the time in California when it was all a man's life was worth to have it known that he was on the side of freedom, and for which a short time after Broderick did lose his life. Mr. Conness, after he took his seat in the United States Senate, presented the cane to Mr. Lincoln, by whom it was highly prized, and now Jesse K. Dubois, one of the wheel-horses of the great Republican party, has become inheritor of the valuable historical cane, and it could not have fallen into more worthy hands. For over thirty years 'Uncle Jesse' (as he is familiarly called by his friends) was the warm friend and companion of Mr. Lincoln, and Mrs. Lincoln and Mrs. Dubois were also warm friends.

ere also warm friends. Chief Justice Chase's Manœuyres.

(From the Louisville Journal.)
Washington, June 18, 1868.—Mr. Chase talks freely of the political situation. He is visited just now by more professional politicians than the President himself, and though the Chase the President himself, and though the Chape movement may be regarded as a sensation, yet the politicians consider it safe to keep up close relations with the possible "coming man." The Chief Justice, on his part, is a person of tact and judgment, who knows how to handle delicate transactions. In conversation at a dinner party a day or two ago, an old line Democrat said to him, "How do you feel, Judge, in the company you are keeping at the present time?"
"I feel," said he, "like a man who has been traveling in foreign countries, improving his view of society, returned once more to the original fold."

"But, do you feel at home?"
"Why shouldn't I? The Democratic Party has gotten round very nearly to the point where I left. It is the conservative force of the nation; and if it were liberalized a little it would inevitably absorb everything that is not radical."
"What do you mean by liberalized?"
"In respect to its organic discipline. Upon its constitutional theories, its view of State rights, and its opposition to radical measures; theusands of Republicans agree with it. Let it remit all local questions to the States, suffer negro suffrage to become an incident as it is, open its doors wide to new comers, not new converts, and it would be a stronger, purer and better party than it was in its happlest days."
