The Democratic Convention. AFTERNOON SESSION.

The description of the control of th of order by the Chair. Upon the expiration of the recess, Mr. Slack renewed his motion.

The Chair—The motion to adjourn until to-morrow morning is a debateable question.

Mr. Miller, of Pennstlvania—If there be no motion pending, I wish to state that there is a misunder standing as to the proposition before the Convention, and as to what would be the effect of it. I suggest that the Chair, from the best lights he has, should make a statement of the question.

The Preside nt—The first vote is upon the motion to adjourn. to adjourn.

The motion to adjourn being put, it was declared lost.

Mr. Brewer, of Pennsylvania—I move that when this Convention adjourn, it adjourn to meet to-mor row morning at ten o'clock, and that hereafter the Convention, upon adjournment, will fix that hour for its meeting. Carried.

The President will now call the States in their words for the purpose of taking their votes moon that when the converted of the convention of the conven ow adjourn.
The motion to adjourn was put and declared lost.

WM. VOGDES, Assignee. Traveling in Palestine.
[Correspondence of the Boston Journal]
There is no land where visitors are so enthusi-There is no land where visitors are so enthusiastic as in Palestine; none where there are such disappointments. Some shed tears of joy in beholding Jerusalem, while others turn away in disgust from its crumbling walls, its heaps of rubbleh, its filthy streets. A friend informs me that while riding from Jaffa to Jerusalem he met an American from Chicago hastening down to Jaffa to embark on the steamer. He had been one day in Jerusalem.

"Let me advise you," said he, "to turn your horse's head toward Jaffa. I have been up to Jerusalem and there is nothing there worth seeing. It is a miserable old town—dirty, narrow streets, peopled by a set of lazy wretches, Arabs, Turks, and monks, doing nothing. It is the dullest, deadest place in all the world. It is one grand humbug." the said District Court.

through the country, was a carpenter and housejoiner from the State of New York, who had accumulated money and was out seeing the world.
He came to Palestine because others came, but his heart was on joiner work.

"I never saw much carpenter work in all my born days," said he. "Such doors and window sashes. I couldn't have believed it possible for men to put together such bungling work as I have seen here in Jerusalem."

At the hotel table in Beyroot my right hand neighbor was a Connecticut judge. "I don't see," said he, "how any one can visit Jerusalem without giving up pretty much all their belief in the Bible. That is the place where Christianity was given; naturally we should expect to find it pure, and what do we see? A set of lazy monks fighting like cats and dogs over a place which they call the Holy Sepulchre. They point out the place where Mary stood, where Jesus stood, where the three crosses stood, and a dozen other places, all absurdities. I don't see how any one can go there without coming to the conclusion that a good deal of what we have supposed was truth in the Bible is not to be believed."

The reply which he heard was this:

"On the contrary, having been through the country, my convictions of the truth of the Bible have been deepened. There are wonderful points of contact between prophety and history, exact fulfillments of prophetic words. This have seen places just as the Bible describes them, and men doing just what the old prophets said they would do—cultivating grapes on the hill of Samaria and spreading their nets on the foundations of Tyre."

Yourists visit Egypt to gaze upon its mighty ruins, to connect themselves with the past by beholding with the eye, but Palestine is a landlo holding with the eye, but Palestine is a land of those in and around Jerusalem. It is only by forgetting the present—the monks and their degradation—and thinking of the past, accepting the history of the Bible, and proving its truth, that the tourist can find pleasure in Palestine.

To those who accept the Bible as the word of is that which is in sigre for them in the pastures of Bethlehem, where the great choir of Heaven sang their song divine, "Peace on earth, good will to men;" or in the peaceful vale of Nazareth. This was a source of much trouble to the great missionary. At length he received a revelation which turned his perplexity to joy. He was shown a cave in a desert place, of the wicked and the enjoyments of the blessed, and return cleansed of all sin. Immediately St. Patrick inclosed the cave, built an oratory in its. neighborhood, and committed it to the custody of a company of monks. Thenceforth, down even to this very hour, the place became a hoted resort of pligrims. Few, however, were found daring enough to penetrate the dismal vault. Still, the feat was attempted on rare occasions, and yet more rarely achieved, for it was fraught with unexampled terror and exceeding peril. Compleuous among the few who ventured to explore its recesses and returned to tell the tale, was the knight Owen. This man had rendered his youth infamous by loose and violent living; but, awakening in time to a fit sense of his wickedness, he sought a Bishop, confessed, so far as in him lay made reparation, and entreated to be burdened with a penance of suitable segerity; Accordingly: the prelate, but with some refuctance, desired him to go to the infernal regions, as displayed in St. Pat-

His head was full of Lake street, Wabash avenue and the Great Central Depot, and so he turned his back in disgust upon the City of the Great King.

I know a Bostonian who, after spending three days in the city and two at the Jordan and Dead Sea, hastened back to Jaffa, declaring that the whole country was not worth two cents.

This past winter, in one of the parties traveling through the country, was a carpenter and house joiner from the State of New York, who had accumulated money and was out seeing the world.
