NEW PUBLICATIONS.

"The Myths of the New World." A Treatise on the Symbolism and Mythology of the Red Race of America." By Daniel G. Brinton, A. M., M. D. New York: Leypoldt & Holt. For sale by CLAXTON, REMSEN & HAFFELFINGER.

Scholarship of a rare patience, and a great natural talent for induction, have been at the service of Dr. Brinton in his effort to systematize the scattered myths of the American races. We are sure that we are not carried away by any predilection in pronouncing that he has put out a master-piece. In reaching his work so ambitiously, we have taken into account the vast disadvantage at which any Caucasian (permit us the word) student approaches the rude philosophies of the tribes. It is most difficult, it has generally been impossible, for such investigators to hear things exactly as they are; the task of distilling from a quantity of legends the essence which commands them all, is difficult to restrain the admixture of one's own theories and prejudices; one may be an Ishraelite, sure that bad Israelites turned red and invented navigation; one may be on the lookout for the Tartar physigonomy; one may sound the qui vive for Christianization, and then he is at the mercy of the Mexican cross-slaves, or of the modifications which the medicine-men were constantly accepting from the early missionaries. From these fallacies the serene judicial temper of Dr. Brinton is entirely free. He takes up the entangled symbols of the American legends as scientifically, we had almost said as mathematically, as the photographic camera takes up the Mexican carvings, placing order and method where a copyist ever so little enslaved by his imagination is led astray, and made a special pleader. When we have added that Dr. Brinton evinces an intimate familiarity with the previous literature of his subject, as well as with the general history of creeds as studied out by German and French metaphysicians, we have perhaps said enough to warrant a niche for his fine work among the technical authorities of its kind; but the author, in his modest preface, disclaims any intention of writing for the antiquary, and solicits a place in the confidence of the more general reader, which place, since his work is singularly lucid and devoid of affected terminology, it is perfectly adapted to fill, without resigning its right to the admiration of the ethnologist.

"Cousin Paul" is the name of a novel just published by G. W. Carleton & Co., New York. The author, whose nom de plume is "Jessie Glenn," is understood to be the wife of Rev. Dr. Schenck, of this city. The story depicts certain phases of fashionable life, and presents in their actual, but most disagreeable form, many of the evils which afflict modern polite society. Particularly is that common vice, defined by the author as the word "flirtation," aimed at, and the really serious results which often ensue from its indulgence, are dealt with in a very full and powerful hand. The story has a deep religious tone, and the author, while sustaining the interest with unusual intensity, and not obtruding her personality upon the reader, contrives to preach many a pleasant sermon, and to say many a noble and kind and gentle thing. The subordinate lessons taught, the sublime religious truths uttered, and the great moral of the whole, so far from detracting from the interest of book, greatly enhance its value, and even the reader most careless of the dinge which comes in immortal ink cannot fail to give the story his careful attention and his hearty approbation. The characters are natural, and are drawn with truth and delicacy. The plot is sufficiently intricate to compel close attention, and very many of the incidental passages have rare dramatic power. The book will find many readers everywhere among the higher classes, and we sincerely hope that the earnest effort of the author to effectuate a little important reform will be crowned with complete success.

The August number of Lippincott's Magazine will be a rich one. It will contain: 1. Dallas Galbraith, Part VIII. 2. Echo Notch. 3. Smoking. 4. Our Globe in 1868. 5. In a Month. 6. A Modern Holiday in Germany. 7. Providence. 8. A Winter's Night in a Wintry Place. 9. Alas! Poor Ghost. 10. Old Letters. 11. Literature of the Leathern Men. 12. Madame La Duchesse. 13. A Nocturne by Chopin. 14. My Acquaintance with Planchette. 15. Carl Schurz's Speech. 16. The Knotty Gossip. 17. Literature of the Day.

FOREIGN VARIETIES.

[Translated for the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.]

Each session of the Corps Législatif costs the nation 2,586,000 francs.

M. Sainte-Beuve continues to receive numerous felicitations upon his attitude in the Senate.

The new French journal, the Tribune, had 18,000 Louis fds. subscribers for its first number, a success beyond expectation.

The Figaro talks of the disappearance of a young lady of family, carried off by an attaché of one of the foreign embassies in Paris, the latter it his haste forgetting a wife and two children left in the city.

At a late festival of freemasons at St. Cloud-sur-Seine, the deputy Jules Favre made an impromptu interrupted by lively applause, sketched out the lines of the two foremost freemasons of the age, Lincoln and Garibaldi.

The ex-King of Hanover is going to reside at Nice, with the emperor's consent. It is said that the liquidation of his organ, the Situation, was unlucky. Numerous writers are complaining, and a good many law proceedings are instituted against the administrators of the bankrupt journal.

"The King of Prussia was lately promenading alone in the garden of the Château of Babelsberg. There he met an interesting young gardener's daughter, with whom he fell into conversation. Suddenly the gardener looked at his watch and appeared in an air of consternation. The king demanded the cause of his alarm, and learned that the young man, who belonged to the landwehr, had but forty-five minutes to report himself at the barracks at Potsdam, and that there was not sufficient time left for him to arrive at the proper hour. The King ordered the horses to be attached, made the young man get into his wagon, and drove him himself to the barracks, where he excused his lateness to the superior officer.

From Basle. The night between Thursday and Friday last was a night of alarm and destruction for the communes of the Haut Leuschenal. The hail and the inundation have caused damages which may be imagined from the fact that on Friday morning a bed of one and two feet of hail was found in some places. The loss in the commune of Wetzikon alone is estimated at 40,000 francs.

The hit of the week, and may be of all the season, is this retort of the deputy, Picard:

"And why would you have a find"—asks an orator in the dispute on the vicinal roads, and was flowing on, when—

"To exhaust it!" interrupted the deputy of the Seine, thus forestalling the response of government, which could certainly have returned no more infallible answer.

Says Louis Ulbach (who so ably edited the New Paris Guide):

Of the first number of the Lanterne fifty thousand copies were sold, of the second more than a hundred thousand, and telegrams are arriving every moment from every part of France containing hundreds of orders. Rochefort being one of those who will not bind themselves to anything, the freshness of his opinion pleases, like a satisfaction of conscience, even those whom it does not concern. He is the last who would have it sometimes little more artistic and literary in expression.

Posters are seen around Paris announcing that the new journal the Electeur which is soon to appear will be under the direction of the deputies Jules Favre, Ernest Picard, and Émile Ollivier.

The adjudication of the Moniteur Universel will take place. It is said, the first of next January. Messrs. Dalloz and Pion will be the principal rivals. M. Dalloz has had an audience with the Emperor, who decides that the title Moniteur Universel being the property of the house of Panckoucke, the new sheet shall be call: Le Journal Officiel de l'Empire Français.

To comprehend the manufacture of public opinion in France, read the following notice, addressed by the civic authority to the gendarmes of the queen and Scherbourg, on the late occasion of the little Prince's visit. The circular is reprinted in the Vigie de Cherbourg:

"The Prince Imperial will arrive to-morrow, the 14th, at Cherbourg; on the 15th the masters, chief countermasters and all countermasters shall be in uniform. The workmen shall be placed on the quays and shall cry seven times, Vive l'Empereur! Vive l'Impératrice! Vive le Prince Impérial! They shall be neatly dressed."

A somewhat singular accident is reported at Paris. On the morning of the 24th of June, the omnibus which runs from the Bridge of Bercy to Ivry had stopped at one of the stations, that of Pavré d'Ivry, when the conductor, a young man of thirty-five, and the driver if he was not annoyed by the fearful heat of the weather.

"So much so that I am half cooked," answered the driver, "and if you'll stand a glass of beer—"

"When you come back," said the conductor, laughing.

"Serious?"

"No mistake, at least if I don't die."

The driver, at the return from Ivry, an hour afterwards, was astonished to find the conductor surrounded by an unusual crowd. The conductor had died of an apoplectic attack.

The press in France is commencing to enjoy some of the fruits of the liberal legislation which has been meted out to it. The journal Le Siècle has been prosecuted for concerning itself with political matters without authorization, and for exciting to hatred and contempt of government. The tribunal condemned the editor, Cimetière, to one month; and Kugelmann, printer, to fifteen days' imprisonment, a fine of one hundred francs for each, and decided that the paper should cease to appear notwithstanding appeal. One of the gendarmes, Gen. Chassey, has lived in the United States.

The minister, prisoner, and several sub-editors of the People, à Marseilles sheet, are notified to defend themselves, on the 1st instant, before the tribunal of that city. Among the accused is M. Royannez, who is now undergoing a sentence of three months in one of the city prisons for a press offence.

The conservative deputies will establish a weekly—or bi-monthly—daily during the election season—called the Three Colors.

The prosecution of the Lanterne will be issued by Hardy de Rageort (evidently an assumed name) to be called the Editor-in-Chief Pointu.

Scintillations from the Lanterne:

What astonishes me on the part of a man so Parisian as M. Haussmann, is his declaration that he was compelled to come from the descent from a "regicide." This term appropriated by the judges of London to that of the invention of the Prefect, I am aware; but will he permit me the observation that it is most dangerous for a government man to employ words of that calibre without more conviction and explanation. It will scarcely be a consolation for the murderers of Pajeu Michel of Servis to repeat to themselves, in marching to the scaffold: "We are regicides," evidently but as M. Haussmann declares that Ben-Saint-Judge, who was made Prefect under the empire, and David, who painted the immortal picture of the coronation, and Perchel, who was named Duke of Orante by Napoleon, and Minister by Louis XVIII, were regicides like us, our crime is only too honorable.

After all is said, I am glad that M. Haussmann has written. I voluntarily render him the justice of recognizing that he, alone of the three or six highest functionaries of the Empire, has made himself amenable to the Press Law.

A newly disembarked Englishman was seen racing through one of the grand building establishments of Paris. During a half hour he was rummaging everywhere, peering with the greatest attention into the faces of the swimmers, throwing his iridescent glances down into the depths of the warm water, and pronouncing from time to time the spiteful word: duped.

The islander did not seem to have a thought of betting himself, and his fortune increased every moment. At last, unable to restrain himself longer, he called the principal swimming-master. "Aoh," said he, "you want to dioup' all my countrymen."

"I understand," answered the robust waterman.

"Aoh, you are laughing at me—I am not to be trifled with."

"What do you want? Will you have drawers, or bathing-gown, a costume?"

"No, I don't wish to bathe."

"Very well, it's not worth while coming here then."

"I wish to see the Emperor bathe."

"Ah, dank rich: but you see, dear monsieur, it is not here. the Emperor comes to bathe."

"Then I am dioupé." I saw a large flag hung over the bath. and I'm told that a flag is always flown where the Emperor is staying." Two Englishmen present explained that a flag over a building establishment did not indicate that the public are admitted to see the Emperor bathe.

FUNERAL OF BISHOP SIMPSON.

Address of Bishop Young.

Bishop C. Kimball, the Mormon Elder, who buried in Salt Lake City on June 24. After funeral orations by various Mormon Elders, Brigham Young arose and spoke as follows:

I wish the people to be as still as possible, and not to whisper. I do not know that I can speak so that you can hear me; but if I can I have a few reflections to lay before you. We are called here on this very important occasion, and we can say truly that the day of this man's death was far better to him than the day of his birth. I will relate to you my feelings concerning the departure of Brother Kimball. He was a man of as much integrity, I presume, as any man who ever lived on the earth. I have been personally acquainted with him forty-three years, and I can testify that he has been a man of truth, a man of benevolence, a man that was to be trusted. Now he has gone and left us. I will say to his wives and his children that I have not felt one particle of death in his house nor about it, and through this scene we are now passing I have not felt one particle of the spirit of death. He has fallen asleep for a certain purpose, to be prepared for a glorious resurrection; and the same Heber O. Kimball, every component particle of his body, from the crown of his head to the soles of his feet, will be resurrected; and he, in the flesh, will see his God and converse with Him; and see his brethren and associate with them, and they will enjoy a happy eternity together. Brother Kimball has had the privilege of dying and dying in his own house in peace, and he has not been followed up by mobbers and assassins. I consider this a great consolation to his family and friends; and it is a great comfort to me to think that Brother Heber C. Kimball had the privilege of dying in peace. It is not a matter of regret, by no means, that we should mourn for. It is a great cause of joy and rejoicing, and comfort to his friends to know that a person has passed away in peace from this life, and has secured to himself a glorious resurrection. The earth, and the fullness of the earth, and all that pertains to this earth is an earthly capacity and is compatible with the glory, joy and peace and happiness of the soul that departs in peace. You may think I have reason to mourn. Brother Heber C. Kimball has been my first counsellor for almost 24 years. I am happy to state it is a matter of great joy to me. This is the third counsellor that has fallen asleep since I have stood to counsel this people, and they have died in the faith. Each of these, their lives were filled up with good works, full of faith, comfort, peace and joy to their brethren. I have looked over this matter. In the year 1844 Brother Joseph presided over the Church, three of the prominent counsel he had associated. This was a matter of regret. Sidney Rigdon, F. G. Williams and William Law, whom many of this congregation knew in Nauvoo, apostatized and left Brother Joseph. He was then left under the necessity of mourning and lamenting over the apostacy of any one of my counsellors, and I hope I shall never have this to regret. I had rather bury them by the score than see one of them apostatize. A great deal could be said concerning Bro. Kimball, whose remains are here. He is not dead. His earthly tabernacle has fallen asleep to be prepared for this glorious resurrection that you and I live for. What can we say to one another? Live as he has lived, be as faithful as he has been; be as full of good works as his life has manifested to us. If we do so, our end will be peace and joy, and we will fall asleep as peacefully. I held my watch with one hand and fastened him with the other, while he breathed his last. For this family to mourn is perhaps natural; but they have not really the first cause to do so. How would you feel if you had a husband or a father that would lead you from the truth? I would to God that we would all follow him in his example in our faithfulness, and be as faithful as he was in his life. To his wives, his children, his friends, his brethren and sisters, to this family whom God has selected from the human family to be his sons and daughters, I say let us follow his example. He has gone to his rest. We can say of him all that can be said of any good man. The Lord selected him, and he has been faithful, and this has made him a great many friends. He has left a legacy of his life well live faithful to our God and our religion. There is no man but what can do good if he chooses, and if he be disposed to choose the good and refuse the evil. If any man choose the evil he will dwindle, especially if he has been called to the holy priesthood of the Son of God. Such a man will dwindle and falter, stumble and fall, and, instead of becoming great and good, he will be lost in forgetfulness. My very last request unto Brother Kimball. I can say to the congregation, we thank you for your attention. We are happy to see you here. I would be a pleasure to us if it would be prudent, and we had time, for you to see the corpse; but it would not be prudent and we have not the time. This, perhaps, will be a matter of regret to many of you; but you must put up with it. I want to say to every one who wishes to see Brother Heber again, live so that you will secure to yourselves a part in the first resurrection, and I promise you that you will meet him and shake hands with him. It will surely follow so, I can give you no such promise. Now, my friends, I feel to bless you and the family, the wives and children of Brother Heber C. Kimball. I bless you in the name of Jesus Christ. Will you receive the blessings which a father and husband has blessed upon your heads? If you live for them you will enjoy them. I think he has never cursed one of his family, but his heart was full of blessings for them. He has blessed his brethren and sisters and neighbors and friends. His heart was full of blessings, but he was a scourge to the wicked and highly feared him. Now, my friends, I cannot talk to you any more, my sore throat will not let me. But I feel to thank you for your kind attention here to-day, to pay our respects to the remains of Brother Kimball, and may God bless you. Amen.
