The Pope's Soldiers Deserting-The Ecomonical Council-Severe Storms, A letter from Rome to an English paper says: A letter from Rome to an English paper says: "Sentries are thickly stationed all around the camp of the Pontifical army to prevent deser-tion. Two mornings ago, on the borders of the forest of Anagni, a pairol of four squadriglieri, commanded by a gendarine, saw five deserters from the Swise carabiner, regiment, coming out of a vineyard eating fruit. The deserters were summoned to halt, but they fied towards, the forest, where, being overtaken, they defended three made prisoners, and one escaped. At the frontier garrisons, the number of men who aban-don their corps is really astonishing, and demon-strates the instability of their attachment to the stamp is wanted in the Pope's army; but when such high-minded officers as Colonel de Charrette leave it there mush be conditions which render the service unbearable. service unbearable.
