ALEXANDER'S DEATH WARRANT READ TO HIM. -The death-warrant of Alfred Alexander, convicted of the murder of Phillis Proctor, was read to the condemned man vesterday, in Moyamensing Prison, by Sheriff Lyle, who was accompanied by his Chief Deputy, Thomas D. Smith, Esq. Upon entering the cell the Sheriff remarked that he had come in the performance of a reluctant duty, which he would very willingly avoid, but which devolved on him by his oath of office. Alexander replied to the Sheriff that he was expectations of the condemned cting him to pay a visit, and that he was perfectly aware the duty was an unpleasant one. Knowing, however, that it was an official obliga-tion, he assured the Sheriff that he regarded the occeding in that sense alone.

Deputy Smith then asked Alexander some uestions relative to his age, place of birth, &c., and the latter in reply stated that he was but 23 years of age. He was born and raised in the city of Philadelphia, and was by occupation a waiter. He had served in this capacity at the Continental Hotel, and in the summer time he was engaged in first-class hotels at the wateringplaces. He had not been much given to the drinking of ardent spirits, but occasionally he would indulge somewhat too freely. On the would indulge somewhat too freely. On the night of the fatality for which he is to suffer, he had been indulging, and he does not have a clear conception as to how the difficulty originated. Of one thing, however, he says he is certain, and that is, that he was not the immediate cause of the woman's death, which he rather attributes to want of care and the unnecessary amputation of a limb. In support of his position in this respect, he urges "It was now." It was now. of his position in this respect, he urges that he left the city after the difficulty and went to New York, where he received intelligence of the death of Phillis. Supposing that her death was attributable to matters other than his own altercation with her, he says he came to Philadelphia and gave himself up to the authorities. alteration with her, he says he came to Philadelphia and gave himself up to the authorities, never dreaming, however, that he would be held for any length of time, as he regarded his complicity with the affair as insignificant. He therefore protests against the rightconsness of his sentence, upon the ground that to punish him, to the extent of taking away his life, is more than commensurate with his guilt. He did not, he says, directly cause the death of another and consequently, should not lose his own life. and, consequently, should not lose his own life.

He did not murmur at the action of the Judge and jury, but he thought the Governor should save him from the gallows.

He was then informed that there was no hope of some of the gallows.

He was then informed that there was no hope of Executive elemency, as the Governor had made up his mind not to interfere. He was advised to make his peace with God during the brief period allowed for his stay on earth, and im answer to the question as to whether he desired the services of any spiritual adviser, Alexander replied that he had already secured the services of Rev. Mr. Hopkins, a colored elergyman, to attend to his spiritual wants.

The Sheriff then read the document to the prisoner, fixing August 25 as the day of execution. During the reading he sat apparently calm and composed, and for a few moments at its close was effected vi et armis.

"Outside the doors a strong force of infantry was formed in readiness to take an active part in quelling the disturbance. Deputy Smith then told the prisoner that he could thus see that his fate was irrevoæbly fixed, and to make good use of the time thus left him, by conferring with his spiritual adviser. The prisoner expressed a desire to do this, and bade the gentlemen a cordial good-byc.
