The Truth about "The Wickedest Man In new York."

Harper's Weekly spoils the very pretty stories bout "the wickedest man in New York" in this fashion:

THE "WICKEDEST MAN" AS HE IS. One of our New York city reporters has lately been exciting the sympathies of citizens and the curiosity of friends at a distance by a highly-colored sensational account of John Allen, the keeper of a low dence-house in Water street, who is designated as "the wickedest man in N. York."

is designated as "the wickedest man in N. York." The story, told with the perfect art of a practiced sensational paragraphist, has been widely circulated and extensively believed.

It really contains not more than a grain of truth, and that grain is distorted and discolored until it is not recognizable. The fact is that John Allen is probably no worse, and certainly no better, than his peculiar class. He is the keeper of one of the lowest of the many vile haunts for sailors to be found in this as in every great maritime city; and he deliberately, calculatingly, and cunningly, makes money by the prostitution of cunningly, makes money by the prostitution of women and the drunkenness of men. He is a man with some little education, for the most part women and the drunkenness of men. He is a man with some little education, for the most part picked up from newspapers and the current literature of the day; but he is superior in this respect only to the men in the same line of business, and far inferior in general intelligence to the majority of our mechanics. He is without moral sentiments, and never had a religious idea; he reads religious papers, tracts, books, hymns, &c., apparently only for the purpose of making a display and exhibition of his knowledge, just as negro minstrels sometimes amuse the thoughtless by burlesques of religious exercises. He is a powerful man, and his roughest vicitors hold him in awe; being a shrewd man, he knows the importance of keeping an orderly house, and it is due to him to say that he enforces order in his house and vicinity. He is as good as an extra policeman in his block, and hence the certain amount of respect in which the police hold him. Our sensationally-disposed friend, with a number of missionaries, visited and saw the man and his establishment under peculiar circumstances. When any member of the Health Board, which possesses certain powers and much influence with the Police Commissioners, visits his house, John Allen naturally makes it look as clean and healthy as possible; when any of the various city missionaries, who have their influhis house, John Allen naturally makes it fook as clean and healthy as possible; when any of the various city missionaries, who have their influence also with the Police Commissioners, call, he "puts on his religious face," as he expresses it, and makes his establishment appear as respectively.

These were the ideas which he expressed to this writer, when he, with an artist, called to see and portray the house and the man just as they are. In fact it was the doleful burden of his whole conversation that Mr. Dyer, his biographer, had painted him too white. He seemed to feel, and painted him too white. He seemed to feel, and ertainly argued, that he, unlike another individual who keeps an extensive dance-house in even hotter_regions_than_Water_street,...was blacker than he was painted. We can not quote all the language which he used in expressing this idea

"Mr. Dyer," he said, very nearly as we give it here, though not verbatim, oaths, indecency, and all, "Mr. Dyer saw my place under peculiar circumstances. When a gentleman comes here we endeavor to treat him right. We try to entertain each man in the way he likes best; if a minister comes, we can sing hymns with him, and he can hear Chester say his catechism; but we've got liquor, and there's the women for them as has the stamps to spend that way. (Mother! mother!" he exclaimed to his wife, as a couple of men walked through the outer-room into the dance hall—a sort of cage where the women seemed to be confined like wild beasts—'a couple of drinks for these gentlemen.") Then he returned to his argument with us, telling of the performance at night, taking care to impress on our minds the fact that they were very different from those which the ministers witnessed, and illustrating the style of his evening visitors by imitations of their drunken manner, and quotations from their filthy and profane language.

He denounced Mr. Dyer very roundly, and spoke of him with great contempt as a "sensation writer." He objected to being called "the wickedest man in New York."

"I am not the wickedest man," he said. "I do

"I am not the wickedest man," he said. "I do a great deal more for the poor than the sensation writers, any how. I feed the hungry and clothe the naked. I give away all my cast-off clothing, and I've taken many a poor fellow to Chatham street and bought him shoes. And I let 'em sleep here by the stove on cold nights. My neighbors will tell you that there ain't a more charitable man in the street than John Allen."

And certainly the neighbors—police, merchants, and all—say John Allen is a quiet, peaceful, law-abiding, generous, and charitable man.

"And Mr. Dyer speaks of my house as if it was "And Mr. Dyer speaks of my house as if it was a den," he said, suddenly, after a brief conversation with a drunken peddler who had stopped at the door to pass the compliments of the morning, and swear a while at a truckman who had 'insulted him. "It's nothing of the kind. It's a boarding-house—just like yours," he added to our artist, thereby causing that gentleman to wince a little, and then blandly smile his appreciation of the remark. "The women pay their board just as you do. Many of them are old, and don't make money and can't pay; but I never turn 'em out into the street on that account. They pay in what they make and do old count. They pay in what they make and do odd chores about the house. The other women who make more pay their board, and spend the rest for clothes—" And then, as if suspecting some for clothes—" And then, as if suspecting some one would suggest it, he quickly added, "and whisky."

Apparently the most of it went for whisky, for the several women that we saw had very little clothing upon their persons, and a great deal of the peculiar color that comes from excessive drinking in their faces. They were old, ugly, haggard, bestial and toothless—"One set of teeth to seven women," suggested a companion—and generally pitiable beyond expression.

Allen was asked in regard to his promise to Allen was asked in regard to his promise to Commissioner Acton to quit the business.

"I did promise," he said. "Mr. Acton sent for me to come to headquarters. I went up, and there I found Dyer with him. I had made up my mind not to speak to Dyer again because o his misstatements about me, but there I was face to face with him, and I would not run away. Mr. Acton asked me if I would quit the business, and after a while I said I would and promised to quit by May 1, or sooner if I could. And I will," he added, emphatically, "for the business is ruined.

added, emphatically, "for the business is ruined. I'm overrun by people that come here to look at me, as if I was a wild beast. They bore me to death and don't spend any money. I have to see hundreds of them a day."

This last remark was meant for a clerical-looking gentleman, who had entered the room a few minutes previously. He had come, as he said, to pay his respects to Mr. Allen, and to say how much he admired him for his determination to out the business.

much he admired him for his determination to quit the business.

"I'm much obliged to you," replied John Allen, extending his hand. "We always try to treat our friends right. I've had a good many visitors lately. I'm always glad to see all them that come to spend their stamps. I don't care much to see any others. The fact is," he added in an undertone to the writer, "I'm bored to death by just such fellows."

As we had not come to "spend any stamps," I suggested to the artist to take the hint and leave. He remained, however, to witness the examina-

He remained, however, to witness the examina-tion of the boy, little Chester, which was an-nounced as the next feature in the entertainment. This writer, having very little disposition for any further performances, took his leave.

English Opinion of the Chinese Mission.

One of the very ablest, and certainly the most liberal of the London journals—the Spectator—has apparently entered upon a crusade against the Chinese Embassy headed by Mr. Burlingame, which promises to embarrass its negotiations with Lord Stanley not a little. The cheerful and facetious mood in which the Spectator opens its batteries fails to cover or blunt the point of its attack. It makes merry over the "picturesqueness of the event," and the "very feminine appearance of the interpreters." It imagines, or affects to believe, that our sense of the whole affair. Then the writer seems to find an effective weapon of attack in Mr. Burlingame's nationality; but if the Ambassador himself lays no claim to any additional authority for his mission because he happens to have been born an American, why should the London journalist throw his nationality in his teeth? And is it fair, or is it true, to say that Mr. Burlingame goes to London "to represent that the Government of the United States wishes China to be admitted without treaties into the family of the world?" The United States wishes nothing of the sort. Our Government has secured an amplification and amendment of the treaty of 1858 on its own account. It is not specially concerned whether the hading powers of Europe frame similar treaties or not. It certainly does not charge itself with the task of getting China or any other community admitted "into the family of the world without treaty." Such a suggestion is the offspring of ignorance or malice, or both.

FIRE IN THE NINTH WARD-NARROW ESCAPE FROM SUFFOCATION .- This morning a fire broke out in a three-storied brick building, No. 704 Arch out in a three-storied brick building, No. 704 Arch street, owned by John Bowman. The bisement, first story and some of the rooms in the upper part of the building were occupied by Mr. Bowman for the manufacture and sale of silver and plated-ware. The third-story and a part of the second story were occupied by J.R. Applegate as a photograph gallery.

The flames originated in the photograph establishment, in the third story, and, owing to the combustible nature of the contents of the apartment, they spread very rapidly. There was in the building an old dumb-waiter, which has not been in use for some time, and the fire dropped through the well-hole to the basement. The fire had been burning for some time before it was discovered, and the alarm given, and when the firemen got into service the description of the statement.

for some time before it was discovered, and the alarm given, and when the firemen got into service the flames were raging fiercely. Before they were extinguished the upper part of the building was completely wrecked, and the whole structure was flooded with water.

Mr. Applegate's photograph establishment was entirely destroyed. He valued his furniture, fixtures, material, &c., at $2,500. Upon this there is an insurance of $1,500, in the Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Bowman had on hand a fine stock, which was much damaged by water and smoke. His loss will be considerable. He has an insurance of $13,500 in New England companies, on his stock and fixtures. This will be more than sufficient to cover the loss.

At the time of the fire Mr. Applegate and At the time of the fire Mr. Applegate and Harry Bowman, a son of the owner of the building, were asleep in a room in the rear of the photograph gallery, in the third story. They were aroused by the suffocating smoke and the cracking of the flames. They ran through the fire and smoke to the main staircase leading to the street, and thus escaped from a horrible death. The origin of the fire is mysterious, and is being investigated by Fire Marshal Blackburn. About eight o clock this morning the smouldering flames broke out again, and the firemen were recalled to the scene. After considerable work the fire was finally extinguished.

INCREASE IN THE PRICE OF GAS .- A meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Philadelphia Gas Works was light yesterday, and it was resolved that the price of gas consumed on and after August 1,1868, be advanced to $2.55 per 1,000 cubic feet, subject to the United States tax of 25 cents per 1,000, with an additional charge of five per cent. If not paid within five days. Chief Engineer Brown in making the announcement of the advance says:

"This increase in the price of gas is owing to the Trustees being compelled to advance the wages of the employes of the Department to such a figure as to amount in the aggregate for one year to $110,193 39, while the advance in the price of gas, based on the private consumption of the year 1867, amounts to $103,130 85."

SUPPOSED THEFT OF REVENUE STAMPS .-- A man named Thomas Harvey, who was very drunk, was arrested last night at Sixth street and Girard avenue. When taken to the station house, the usual search of his clothing was made, and in his pocket were found a large number of 25 cent revenue stamps, such as are generally used to put upon lager beer kegs. Harvey is a plumber, and it is supposed that the stamps were stolen from a brewery where he was engaged at work yesterday. This morning he was taken before Ald. Hood and was committed for a further hearing.

A STRIKER IN TROUBLE .- Thomas Goldwin, aged 20 years, was before Alderman Maull this morning, upon the charge of assault and battery with intent to kill. He is a brickmaker by trade, and recently worked at Fisher's avenue and Market street, West Philadelphia. The workmen struck for higher wages, but a colored man continued to work at the old rates. He was waited upon by the strikers and requested to quit work. He refused, whereupon, it is alleged, Goldwin struck him upon the head with a shovel, causing a severe wound. The accused was committed to Another Arrest .- A youth named Charles Harper, alias Slippery Harper, was arrested yesterday, by the Sixth District Police, upon the charge of having been concerned in the robbery of the house of R. H. Farley, No. 1630 Arch street. Harper, it is alleged, assisted others to get through the window, and then remained on the outside to watch while the goods were being packed up. He had a hearing before Alderman Jones, and was committed in default of $1,000 ball for trial. ball for trial.

Assaulting a Policeman .- John Fitzpatrick was arrested last night by Policeman Scranton. at Second and Arch streets, for disorderly con duct. He resisted the officer in a violent manner, and finally assaulted him. Another policeman came along, and after considerable trouble, John was taken to the Station-house. This morning he had a hearing before Recorder Givin, and wa-held in $1,000 bail for assault and battery.

THE CITY EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE -The headquarters of the Union Republican City Execu tive Committee have been established at No. 1105 Chestput street. Between the hours of 10 A. M and 1 P. EASY POLISH! LASTING POLISH! BRILLIANT Polish!—A polish that costs nothing, as each box costing 25 cents saves more than 25 cents' worth of boots. This is the new boot polish brought out by J. B. Dobbins, proprietor of the celebrated Electric Soap (whose immense works are located at Sixth street and Germantown avenue). His new Polish will soon have a world-wide reputation. Mr. Dobbins makes it a rule to offer no new thing that is not superior to all rivals. This accounts for his great success. His new Blacking would have been in the market months ago, but for the fact that he was determined to bring it to absolute perfection before offering it, which he has at last accomplished through a series of the most thorough and scientific chemical experiments. For this reason the Blacking will undoubtedly have a great demand "from the word go." Dealers will act wisely by supplying themselves with it at once, as Dobbin is bound to revolutionize the boot-polish world in his usual double-quick style, by thundering his great invention at the gates of public opinion through bill-posters and the powers of the public Press. All hail to the wonderful new Polish What a relief to the thousands of young men who have hitherto lamented the short-lived
