At last we have Seymour's letter accepting that found expression before the war. Mr. the Democratic Presidential nomination. He gives as a reason for his delay in issuing this when he penned that paragraph, for no man ocument, that he wanted to see "what light knows better than he does, the exact charthe action of Congress would throw upon the interests of the country." The true explanation of his tardiness is, probably, to be found n the fact that he desired to ascertain the popular feeling regarding certain obnoxious clauses in the Democratic platform, and to shape his course somewhat with the current. The letter is distinguished by two characteristics—the utter falsity of its statements and its want of exact accord with the letters of Frank Blair and with the expressed opinions of the other Democratic leaders. The first peculiarity is not at all remarkable; the latter sufficiently so to excite the surprise of those who do not understand the ambiguity, and consequent opportunity for diverse construction, of the Democratic manifesto. It was inevitable that we should find fault with Mr. | be overthrown by the Executive * * who Seymour, but this letter is so vulnerable, and will fail to do his duty if he allows the contradiction, that the mendacity of the author can be made clear to the dullest comprehen sion, while its failure to agree precisely with the declarations of Blair and other leading Democrats, is manifest from simple com-

This is repetition of the oft repeated Copperhead slander that General Grant will use the troops in the South to prevent free expression of opinion at the polls. General Meade's recent rder withdrawing his soldiers from all supervision of civil affairs, and the well known States are in organized existence, and in i hands of legally elected civilians, is sufflcient answer to this. Mr. Seymour is aware as far as General Grant is concerned, a Southchoice, as can the most violent Democrat in New York city. He knows, moreover, that if General Grant had the power that is attri-

The issue is as clear as any that has ever existed between two political parties. It is to this fact that Mr. Seymour must attribute the "uncertainties" with which "the minds of business men are perplexed;" not to the policy of Congress. Under the latter, our commercial relations with the South would now be resumed, were it not that merchants fear the redemption of the Democratic promise to undo the work of reconstruction, and disturb the work of reconstruction, and disturb the work of reconstruction, and disturb the work of reconstruction, and design results that have sprung from that work. He says "the elecabroad. calculated to elevate Philadelphia's credit tion of a Democratic Executive would not give to that party power to make sudden and violent changes." This is a declaration against the announced determination to withdraw Congressional reconstruction in the rebel States; and it is another result of Seymour's desire to follow the popular current. Wade Hampton's paragraph in the platform, says. "The reconstruction acts are unconstitutional and void." Frank Blair, in his Brodhead letter, asserts that "the real and only issue in the contest," is upon the substantiality of this reconstruction, and that it "can Constitution to perish under a series of enactments which are in palpable violation of its investigation as will bring the offender to fundamental principles." Mr. Seymour affects to believe that his nomination has been received with unparalleled vention that effected it, and fell as coldly upon the rank and file of the party, as the nomination of a man who in local elections has invariably run behind his ticket only could. Neither his personal qualities nor his political career furnish material from which enthusiasm can be manufactured. The boast that he gave 16,000 commissions during the war, avails nothing in view of the facts, that from his official position he could not possibly have done otherwise, and that his whole record during the strife was that of a strenuous, consistent and malignant oppo nent of the war itself, and of every measure which could aid its successful conclusion. Mr. Seymour's letter is a failure. It is un skilfully constructed; it is filled with sophistry the public offices of the country under fact that the local governments of nearly all and falsehood; and while it is open to the ridicule and contempt of the Republicans, i by no means satisfies the demands and expec tations of the Democracy. New York, Aug. 6 .- Arrived, steamers Erin WRECK OF THE STEAMER SEA [From the Chicago Journal, August 4.]

On the 9th day of last April the beautiful an favorite steamer Sea Bird, of Goodrich's line, was burned and sunk in Lake Michigan, near Waukegan. It is believed that nearly one hundred lives were lost by the fearful calamity, and the painful uncertainty as to the exact number will never be dispelled, for it is now ascertained that the passenger list was destroyed in the iron asfe. On Sunday last the propeller G. J. Trucsdell. belonging to the Goodrich line, steamed from this city to the closing scenes of that fearful disfound lying in the same spot where it has lain since it went down, about three-fourths of a mile from shore, and some four miles this side of Waukegan.

An expert diver had been taken on board the Truesdell, and, having made the necessary at rangements, he was lowered to the wreck. returning, reported the sunken vessel to be lying partially on her side, broken in twain, about midships, and that after a careful search, he had been unable to find any bodies. The safe was been unable to find any bodies. The safe was broken open and discovered to be entirely empty, the terrible heat of the burning boat having entirely consumed all the papers, including the passenger list, stored in it, thus destroying every clue as to the exact number who perished. The safe itself is nothing but a stout iron box, intended to be burglar proof, but not made to stand extreme heat. It is badly rusted and battered, and now lies just outside the office of the Goodrich line, near Rush street bridge.

Having finished the examination of the safe, the diver was let down for the second time and attached the line to the anchor of the Sea Bird, which was also hauled on board the propeller. Further investigations were brought to a close by the rising of a high wind, and the Truesdell returned to the city. There is a probability that the search will be centinued at some future day, the search will be continued at some future day

ARRIVED THIS DAY.

Steamer Brunette. Freeman, 34 hours from New York, with mades to A fire Oil the Politics of the Polit Hon. J. P. Wickersham, State Superintendent, made a very animated and eloquent reply to the report of last night. He was not afraid of criticism. He defended the common school system of Pennsylvania. He had repelled former attacks upon this system, and he proposed to bury this opposition by the figures to-day. There was no irreligion in our common schools. Their teachers, in a moral and religious point of view, would compare with men and women in any other profession. Indeed they could not receive certificates if their moral character was not sound. The Pennsylvania system was the best in the United States. He boped the time would soon come when every man and woman in the land would be able to receive honors from something like a postgraduate college in Pennsylvania, without one cent of expense. His own son was in a common schools and the specific tim the Forty-first Congress, is one of the lastest and most enthusiastic ever held in this State.

Thirteen ballots were taken, when there being no prospect of making a nomination, the convention adjourned until to-merow morning. The last ballot stood: F. E. Woodbridge, 71; W. G. Veasey, 67; C. W. Willard, 39; W. M. Dorr, 11.

From Albany.

Albany, Aug. 6.—The Loyal League of Utica, with a large number of the personal and political friends of Hon. Roscoe Conkling, serenaded bim at the Butterfield House last evening. When he appeared upon the balcony he was vociferously applauded. He spoke briefly in response to the call of his friends. MEMORANDA
