Adah teases Menken. "B. H. N" (probably Orpheus C. Kerr, one o the Menken's husbands) writes as follows to the

N. Y. Tribune:
Sir: In your recent oblituary notice of the late Adah Isaacs Menken, I believe that I can detect the hand of a writer, who, whatever his sense of duty as a public chronicler and moralist may be, bas still a mind to comprehend and a heart to credit such extenuation of circumstantial error in a woman's career as an unprejudiced witness an offer and an impartial commentator accept.

Equally intelligent conclusions differ widely as to the natural qualifications of womanhood for those occupations wherein popular approval and support are challenged at the expense of private sanctity; but there can scarcely be two opinions concerning the tendency of all social and moral education to either divert a woman from such presumed self-sacrifice, or turn the pitiless mag-nifying glass of ultra-censoriousness upon her every defect, if inclination or destiny successfully every defect, if inclination or destiny successfully tempts her to defy intolerant custom.

The subject of your notice and this communication not only had her lot, from imperious necessity, with those of her sex who so call upon themselves the conventional censure of inert morality, but was also peculiarly misfitted, by her impulsive, undisciplined nature, to exact even ordinary justice from her judges. Compelled, while yet a child to go upon the stage in New Orleans as an operatic dansense, that her widowed mother and helpless younger sister might be saved from want, she knew henceforth no other school, no kinder home than the theatre, and gave to it an energy and unsuspecting aspiration which had brought fairer fruit if more sophistically directed. Soon separated from her family by the exigencies of a profession in which she rapidly arose to perilous success, and defamily by the exigencies of a profession in which she rapidly arose to perilous success, and deprived of every sacred influence by which the female character is guided and guarded to the pure and gentle royalty of home-life, she grew into the wild, volatile, improvident creature of a life as unstable and inconsistent as the popular ca-rice which gives it motive.

Taught only by her unschooled impulses to discriminate between wisdom and folly; governed only by the uneducated dictates of a passionate intellect in the assertion of an individuality which knew not that it should seek any other justifica tion than its own felt necessity, she provoked a thousand scandals by her mere ignorance of the studied forms of propriety, and was deemed an exception to all the possible good of her calling because she knew not how to identify herself with because she knew not how to identify herself with a respectable average of its evil. From this to an impetuous defiance of the misjudgment exaggerating her oddities into graver faults, was but a step; and then came a passionate, untutored spirit's spasmodic attraction to the first and falsest pretender of the immediate sympathy it craved. To expect the appearances of deliberate prudence, or even common discretion, from a rank, untrained nature like hers, had been futile indeed, but too often the public voice accused her as a reckless trafficker in her own self-perverted sensibilities, trafficker in her own self-perverted sensibilities, when it should have been silent through pity for her as the victim of their wanton deception and heartless abuse by others.

The present writer has no desire to mar the lesson of misguided talents and a wemanhood lesson of misguided talents and a wemanhood soiled in the dust; yet would he, as having a sad and truthful knowledge of his subject, plead carnestly against a too harsh judgment of one in whose homeless and unfriended life there was much to claim the forbearance of every just man, and make every woman's uncharity for woman melt in a relenting tear. I am, sir, yours truly, § New York, Aug. 13th. R. H. N.

THE PALACE OF HOLYROOD.

Scottish Scenes. A correspondent of the New York Times, traveling in Scotland, furn relative to Edinburgd. cotland, furnishes the following items

And so I sadly went to the Ancient Palace of Holyrood, and wandered through the rooms where poor beauteous Mary, Queen of Scots, lived with her gay little household, the reception room where she was browbeaten by Knox, because she would be a papist, until he left her in tears. He also preached against her until, as he confesses, "Papists and Protestants were both offended, was his most familiars disduined him for confesses, "Papists and Protestants were both of-fended; yea, his most familiars disdained him for that speaking." Here is her bed-room, her dressing-room, with the narrow private staircase, up which were admitted the murder-ers of Riccio, and the little supper-room, where he clung to her for protection. It is very sad to at and in the little quaint apartments, where she stood, to look from the windows from which she so pensively looked, mourning in her home sickness for her beloved France. The furniture, the bed, may be of doubtful authenticity, but of the rooms there is no doubt at all; here is the winrooms there is no doubt at all; here is the window from which she must have looked, and there is the towering Crag and Arthur's Seat, which overlook Edinburgh. Queen Mary landed here in 1561; she was here just three centuries ago; then outraged, betrayed, imprisoned eighteen years in England, and then, when her hair had turned gray, and her sweet beauty wasted in this long imprisonment, she laid her head meekly upon the block, and the headsman' axe descended. And ever since English historians have been busy in fouling her name and exalting that of the tigress who promised her protection, and murdered her. Then I went into the roofless rnin of the Royal Chapel, where she was married to the misorable Darnley, and peered into the vault where he was buried with several Scottish Kings—where she would have mass said that howied around the raised gates. For two hundred years it was death to say mass in Scot-land; now there are three or four Roman Catholic Chapels in Edinburgh, and more in Glasgow. In the Highlands the old faith was never entirely After a beautiful drive in the suburbs, we went After a beautiful drive in the suburbs, we went down High street and the Canongate, past the house of John Knox, and through Cowgate. These are famous historic places in the Old Town between the Castle and Holyrood Palace, with high houses and narrow courts, swarming from cellar to garret with the poor. There is no greater contrast anywhere than between the magnificence of the New Town, and the filth, squalor and misery of the Old Town. Edinburgh and Glasgow are more crowded, and in portions more wretched misery of the Old Town. Edinburgh and Glasgow are more crowded, and in portions more wretched than the worst parts of London. I do not understand how men of intelligence and wealth can allow such a state of things to continue; and if political economists can persuade themselves that they are not their brothers' keepers, I cannot see how Christians can come to the same conclusion.

SCOTTISH MANNERS AND CUSTOMS.

The manners and customs of Edinburgh are not so peculiar and national as one might expect. You see more Scottish costumes in London. The people are not very pretty. Beautiful faces are less frequent than in Lancashire or in Southern England. Most of the old men, and many of the old women have a curious resemblance to the Scottish Kings—where she would have mass said in spite of John Knox and the Edinburgh mob that howled around the Palace gates. For two

England. Most of the old men, and many of the cold women have a curious resemblance to the portraits of Thomas Carlyle. In the lower classes the girls and women run to legs, rather, and there is a great scarcity of shoes and stockings. Not only young girls, but middle-aged and old women walk about the streets in bare fact and descess charter than the present feature. and old women walk about the streets in bare feet and dresses shorter than the present fashion. Some of the little girls, naked from the knees down, are well formed and pretty. I find more beauty in Glasgow than in Edinburg, which I attribute to a large admixture of Irish. But the element of bareleggedness, if I may be permitted the expression, is Irish as well as Scotch—the original Fenians wore no trousers—and the streets of Glasgow as well as those of Edinburgh are trodden by a barefooted multitude, as well as the glens of the Highlands. At the rallway station at Glasgow, walking gracefully along the platat Glasgow, walking gracefully along the plat-form, I saw a well-grown girl of fifteen, with a long ostrich plume in her fashionable hat, and her feet and legs as naked as she was born. She did not seem in the least conscious of any deficiency in her costume. A fellow voyager said he saw a woman bathing in a Highland lake one morning, in puris naturalibus, but sweetly enveloped in the same beautiful unconsciousness. There is nothing like travel in foreign parts to remove providing same beautiful unconsciousness. There is nothing like travel in foreign parts to remove prejudices and enlarge the mind.

The sale of La Lanterne still continues brisk in Paris, and as its articles, bitter and provocative though they be, are yet kept within the letter of the law, the Imperial agents have found it impossible to wreak the Imperial vengeance on M. Rochefort and his flame-covered pamphlets. There is no doubt, however, that the Emperor is excessively indignant, and that the censors have orders to exercise special vigilance. A curious instance of this occurred the other day. There is a new periodical called Paris Magazine, contributed to by some of the ablest Parisian writers, one of whom, Emile Blavet took to the office of the estampillage, a place for the impression of the government stamp, without which nothing is allowed to be sold, to the official. That gentleman glanced atthe table of contents, and then, with a polite bow, returned it to M. Blavet, expressing at the same time his regret that it could not be stamped. On M. Blavet's inquiring the reason, it was pointed out to him that the list contained an article on M. Rochefort and his writings, and the official stated he had orders to refuse to license any work in which that name appeared.

CITY BULLETIN.

Funeral of the Rev. Thomas G. Allen.—The funeral of the venerable Thomas G. Allen took place from his residence, 926 Lombard street, yesterday afternoon, at five o'clock.

During the afternoon large numbers of the friends of the deceased availed themselves of the opportunity to take a parting look at the remains, and it was touching to witness these demonstrations of affection and respect on the part of all classes, from doctors of divinity, down to the humblest poor, both white and black, who had long enjoyed the ministrations of this faithful City Missionary.

The deceased was buried in his black robe of office, and his care-worn features well expressed the repose that has come at last, after a very long terday afternoon, at five o'clock.

the repose that has come at last, after a very long life of constant privation and toll.

After a brief preliminary service by the Rev. Charles D. Cooper, at the residence of the decased, the funeral procession moved to the church of the Ascension, where the burial service was read by the Rev. Dr. Suddards. The church was filled with a large congregation of both sexes, white and black, who united in the reponsity parts of the service with an earnestness.

sexes, white and black, who united in the responsive parts of the service with an earnestness which showed that they had not been assembled by any mere motives of curiosity.

Among the clergy present were the Rev. Drs. Suddards and Yarnall; Rev. Messrs. Parvin, Weld, Ward, Meade, Moore, Hurst. Durborow, Furey, Malson, Meyer, Bronson, Rudderow, Reddles, Clark, Edwards, Bowers, Fisher and W. W. Newton.

At the conclusion of the services at the church.

W. Newton.

At the conclusion of the services at the church, the large congregation was dismissed, without any address from either of the officiating clergy, an omission which seemed to be much felt by the many friends, who were expecting some personal tribute to be paid to the memory of this most worthy and valued old minister and missionary. The interment took place at Ronaldson's Cemetery, the concluding portion of the service being read by the Rev. George A. Durborow.

A meeting of the Episcopal clergy, in reference to the death of Mr. Allen, will be held at the Episcopal Rooms, on Monday, at noon.

RED MEN'S CELEBRATION. - The new hall erected at Third and Brown streets by the Independent Order of Red Men, has been fully completed, and the ceremonies connected with its inauguration will take place next week. The invited guests, comprising delegations from the Grand Lodges of other States, will arrive to-morrow, and will have an appropriate reception. On Monday there will be a parade of the Order and a pic-nic at Washington Retreat. In the proces-sion there will be representatives from the Grand Lodge of the United States, members of the Grand Lodge of the United States, members of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, representatives from Grand Lodges of eight other States, and the members of thirty subordinate Lodges. On Tuesday morning the inauguration of the hall, will take place, the ceremonies being conducted by the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, assisted by the representatives from the other Grand lodges. On the evening of that day there will be a grand ball in the splendid saloon of the hall. The public will have an opportunity of inspecting the hall during Sunday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

LARCENY OF JEWELRY .- A young man named Horatio Mitchell was before Ald. Godbou yesterday upon the charge of the larceny of jewelry. It is alleged that a few days ago he was detected in leaving the house of Patrick Lafferty, on Market street, above Thirtieth, with three watches and and some jewelry, which had been taken from one of the upper rooms. The stolen property was taken from him and he was allowed to leave. Yesterday Mr. Lafferty met him at Broad and Market streets, called a policeman and had him arrested. Mitchell was committed in default of arrested. Mitchell was committed in default of $1,000 bail to answer.

MALICIOUS MISCHIEF .- James Cochran, an Irishman, and 68 years of age, got drunk yesterday and drove his cart up South street at unlawtul speed. At Seventh street, he maliciously drove into a wagon and smarked it. He was ar-rested and, after a hearing before Ald. Morrow, was held in $1,000 bail to answer.

STEALING YARN.-Mary Jane Galbraith was detected in the act of stealing yarn from a factory at Eleventh and Catharine streets, where she was employed. Yarn had been missed, and she had been suspected and watched. When arrested, yarn valued at about $10 was found on her per-son. She was committed by Ald. Mink.

BOLD THEFT OF JEWELRY .- This morning an individual entered the store of W. J. Holt, No. 243 Chestnut street, and called for some articles. The attendant moved around to get what was desired when the fellow seized a tray containing 22 plain gold rings and ran off. An alarm was raised, but the thief succeeded in escaping with his

SUPERVISORS APPOINTED .- Mayor McMichael has completed the list of Supervisors of the city by the appointment of the following:

Twenty-second Ward, Second Division—Wm. C. Johnson. Twenty-fifth Ward—Wm. Huston. Twenty-eighth Ward—Wm. D. Thomas.

ATTEMPTED TILL TAPPING .- A negro named William Laufting went into a milk house on Fourth street above Green, this morning, and atrough street above dreen, this morning, and at-tempted to rob the money drawer. He was ob-served and then ran. He was pursued to Fourth and Brown streets, where he was captured. Al-derman Toland committed him.

LARCENY .- Geo. Myers and Elizabeth Reigel were before Ald. Bonsall this morning upon the charge of the larceny of a dress and suit of clothes from a beer saloon on Shippen street, above Sixth. They were committed for a further

IF we accept as a test of the superior excellence of the Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machines the manner in which they are appreciated by the public (and why should we not?), we can point proudly to the number of them sold up to the time when the Howe patent terminated, September 10, 1867. While 300,000 of the Wheeler & Wilson had been manufactured and sold, the sewing machine company making the next largest number reached only 202,000. Facts are stubborn things.

Are now finished and in operation. Although this road is built with great rapidity, the work is thoroughly done, and is pronounced by the United States Commissioners to be first-class in every respect, before it is accepted, and before any bonds can be issued upon it. before any bonds can be issued upon it.

Rapidity and excellence of construction have been secured by a complete division of labor, and by distributing the twenty thousand men employed along the line for ong distances at once. It is now probable that the Whole Line to the Pacific will be Completed in 1869,

The Company have ample means of which the Government grants the right of way, and all necessary timber and other materials found along the line of its operations; also 19,800 acres of land to the mile, taken in alternate sections on each alde of the road; also United States Thirty-year Bonds, amounting to from $18,000 to $26,000 per mile, according to the difficulties to be surmounted on the various sections to be built, for which it takes a second mortgage as security, and it is expected that not only the interest, but the principal amount may be paid in services rendered by the Company in transporting in services rendered by the Company in transporting troops, mails, &c.

THE EARNINGS OF THE UNION PACIFIC BAIL. BOAD, from its Way or Local Business only, during the year ending June 30th, 1868, amounted to over which, after paying all expenses, was much more than sufficient to pay the interest upon its Bonds. These earnings are no indication of the vast through traffic that must follow the opening of the line to the Pacific, but they certainly rows that:

Four Million Dollars,

Are Entirely Secure.

The Union Pacific Bonds run thirty years, are for $1,000 each, and have coupons attached. They bear annual interest, payable on the first days of January and July at the Company's office in the city of New York, at the rate of six per cent. in gold. The principal is payable in gold at maturity. The price is 10%, and at the present rate of gold, they may a libral income on their cost. gold, they pay a liberal income on their cost.

A very important consideration in determining the value of these bonds is the length of time they have to run.

This well known that a long bond always commands a much higher price than a short one. It is safe to assume that during the next thirty years the rate of interest in the United States will decline as it has done in Europe, and we have a right to expect that such six per cent. securities as these will be held at as high a premium as those of this Government, which, in 1837, were bought in at from 20 to 23 per cent. above par. The export demand alone may produce this result, and as the issue of a private corporation, they are boyond the reach of political action. corporation, they are beyond the reach of political action.

The Company believe that their Bonds, at the present rate, are the cheapest security in the market, and the right to advance the price at any time is reserved. Bubscriptions will be received in Philadelphia by
