Henry McDougal went in this wide, wide world, he was sure to have some one of these agents walking up to him and boring him to take out a policy in some company or other. They tackled him in the street, at church, in bed while he was washing himself and at prayers. Every one of them belonged to a company that had millions on millions of capital, on which they worked along, it appeared, simply for the purpose of being beneficent to Wm. Henry McDougal, for according to these agents, all Mr. McDougal had to do was to take out a policy, and begin to squander a princely revenue

But at last William Henry was so annoyed by this attention that he determined to play a series of jokes on the agents, and hold them up to contempt and ridicule. So be first took a risk in the Hopelessly Mutual Accident Insurance Company for five thousand dollars. Then he went around and spread his left leg over a railroad track, and had it ripped right off by a locomotive. Then he invested in the Wanderer's Friend Company (he went for the accident companies first, you understand,) and immediately afterwards fell through a hatchway and broke his right arm so that it had to be carved off. Two days after his recovery, and just after he had taken out a policy in the Unmarried Aunts and Destitute Nieces Company, he arranged a double-barrelled gun so that it prematurely exploded and amputated the whole top of his head. But, before he got her trepanned, he took some more chances in another accident company, and it was well he did, too, for while the surgeon was butchering away at his skull, the knife fell, and, with such nice pre cision,that Mr. MacDougal's nose melted off in a HALL OF THE YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN

Mac, you may be sure was heartily amused at the dismay of the companies, but he had a great fund of humor, and he wasn't half through yet. One week after he had got his policies all fixed, the only boiler that burst that month in Philadelphia, exploded, and but one man was injured. His name was William Henry MacDougal. He was thrown ninety feet in the air, and he came down with his other arm off, with three ribs broken, and with a compound fracture of the spine. He laughed in his empty sleeve at the misery of the company, but he enjoyed the joke even more when, after taking another risk, he went out and got struck by lightning so that his left side was paralysed for life.

He carried the thing too far I think, when he again invested heavily only the day before his right eye was poked out with an umbrella at a Democratic ratification meeting. And it was unpardonable for him to have his pocket full of policles at the very moment when a brick fell from a new house and broke his collar bone, so that he staggered against a scaffolding pole and jabbed

Any other man would have had fun enough, but he must go and invest again, and then hobble around to a saw mill, and dispose his person so that the gang-saw bissected his remaining leg in about one second. But he was in for getting the laugh on those agents, and so he kept on taking out policies against accidents, and then he fell over an oyster knite, and ran it through his lung, and in trying to cure the wound, he took the wrong medicine, and all but poisoned himself. Then he engaged a dog to grab him by the leg

He would very likely have lived in peaceful retirement for many happy years, but just after getting his life insured he ate inordinately of toasted cheese one evening, and it so completely shattered his nervous system that he died the next morning. Poor Mac! Too much levity was his bane, but we can forgive his errors now and shed a silent tear over the gentle humorist's

LETTER FROM WASHINGTON.

Dead Leck between Secretary McCul loch and Commissioner Bollins-The Latter Determined Not to Yield-Mc-Culiech Controlling all the Minor appointments for the Benefit of the Democrats-Samuel J. Randall and Thomas B. Florence the Spokesmen. for Philadelphia Justice Done to a Pennsylvania Officer Chivalry at the White Sulphur Carpet-baggers Caricatured, &c.
Correspondence of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin 1

Washington, Aug. 21.—The rupture between Secretary McCulloch and Commissioner Rollins. in regard to the appointments of Internal Revenue Supervisors, is the engrossing subject of conversation here, and McCulloch's course is strongly denounced by all Republicans as narrow-minded and unbecoming a high public functionary. The Secretary, per se, is not a man of much determination of character, and his frequent visits to the White House, and long interviews with the President, since the cases of the Supervisors have been under consideration, lead to the belief that been under consideration, lead to the belief that his action is inspired by the presiding genius at the Executive Mansion. The nominations made by Rollins for these positions were all Republicans, men of standing, honesty and integrity of character, and competent for the places.

The Secretary takes no exception to them on these grounds, but argues that the appointments ought to be divided between Republicans and Democrats, and positively refuses to confirm any ought to be divided between Republicans and Democrate, and positively refuses to confirm any of them, unless such a partisan arrangement is made. Commissioner Rollins, on the other hand, asserts that political considerations should have nothing to do with these appointments, and having recommended capable nies, he is determined to throw upon the Secretary the responsibility of rejecting them. If he pleases purely sibility of rejecting them, if he pleases, purely on political grounds. The Secretary declines to reject any, and refuses to act upon the nominations made, unless the Commissioner agrees to his terms, which the latter refuses to do. And thus the matter stands. In the meaning the thus the matter stands. In the meantime, the country is losing thousands of dollars daily by this clashing of authority.

THE SECRETARY MAKING MINOR NOMINATIONS.

The Secretary has lately taken into his own hands the appointment of all the minor officers in the internal revenue service, which the law gives him, such as storekeepers, gaugers, and inments have been made by the continues appoint. now the Secretary insists upon taking them into his own hands, and in this way, two or three thousand offices will be given to the Democrats before the payt election. He cate artisates before the next election. He acts entirely under Democratic influences, and for Philadelphia appointed five gaugers in the First District on the recommendation of Samuel J. Randall, and in opposition to the nominations made by Collector Abel, who recommended several Republicans.

John C. McCall and Wm. McCormick have been appointed gaugers in the First District, in addition to those before reported.

In the Second District, Thomas B. Florence assumes to control all the appointments for that District, and this has been conceded to him by the Secretary.

the Secretary.
In the Fourth District, A. J. Lechler and Wallace Clifton have been appointed gaugers, in addition to those previously reported. Both are Democrats, which shows that Secretary McCulloch has determined to throw all the patronage to the Democratic party.

No storekeepers have yet been appointed for Philadelphia, but the struggle for these appointments is very lively, being mostly confined to the Democrats for the Republicans see no chance, the Democrats for the Republicans see no chance, and fail to make application.

JUSTICE TO A PENNSYLVANIA OFFICER.

By direction of the Secretary of War, so much of special field orders No. 31, dated February 3, 1863, from Headquarters Department of the Cumberland, as dismissed Captain Samuel R. McKesson, Seventy-seventh Pennsylvania Volunteers, for absence without leave, is revoked, his absence having been satisfactorily explained, and he is honorably discharged from the service of the United States as of the date of said order of dismissal. He will receive no final payments until he shall have satisfied the Pay Department that he is not indebted to the Government.

At the White Sulphur a number of the most noted ex-rebel Generals are hob-nobbing with Generals of the Union army, and are having a jolly good time in "fighting their battles o'er again," over their mint-juleps and "whisky straights." General Rosecrans went over this week in the same train with Longstreet, Ewell and other ex-officers of the confederate army. This is much more pleasant than "gunning" siter each other, as in the days of yore. All the Federal officers who go there, however, have an affinity for our Southern brethren.

A Curious Bit of Southern History. A correspondent of the Springfield (Mass.) Re-ublican furnishes the following: Ben. H. Hill, at the Atlanta Democratic Con-

Ben. H. Hill, at the Atlanta Democratic Convention, after a long and bitter speech in support of Blair's revolutionary doctrines, said: "When liberty shall return, when the law shall be again our respected, and good men shall be again our rulers, we must gather all the journals, and Constitutions, and enactments of every character, of the Conventions and assemblies thus force upon the lower and frand and responsitions and catches. the Conventions and assemblies thus forced uponus by force and fraud and usurpation; and catching a nre from neaven, burn them up forever!
And right here, my countrymen, I want you to

Shortly after the adoption of the Constitution of Georgia, (I do not know the year,) the Legislature passed an act to sell the Indian lands of the State, and, I believe, chartered three. the year.) the Legislature passed an act to sell the Indian lands of the State, and, I believe, chartered three companies to dispose of them; the Georgia Land Company, the Mississippi Land Company, and the Yazoo Land Company; directing scrip to be issued at ten cents an acre, payable in Spanieh milled dollars, but would not receive Georgia State scrip; and sent their agents North to dispose of the same. Their agents succeeded in disposing of quite an amount in the New-England States, and among the purchasers were Eliphalet Dickinson, $5,000; and Consider Dickinson, $5,000; in all $19,000 from three brothers in the town of Deerfield, for which they received nothing. There were many others in old Hampshire county that purchased various amounts. The agents took the money home with them, but, as is supposed, did not divide it so as to suit all parties (since none of it appears to have got into the State Treasury). The disaffected parties, who did not get any of the money, succeeded in electing a Legislature that voted to annul the acts of a former Legislature, and to destroy all records of grants, although they knew the land had been sold to parties who supposed the State of Georgia would fulfil its contracts. They voted to cut out all leaves containing any of the enactments, and burn them, which was accordingly done, and the papers were burned in front of the State House in Milledge. which was accordingly done, and the papers were burned in front of the State House in Milledge-ville, to the gratification of the State officials engaged therein, but to the diagrace of the State of Georgia. Gen. Grant on Incipient Rebellion.

In 1861, while U. S. Grant was returning from Covington, Ky., to Springfield, in obedience to a despatch from Gov. Yates, tendering him the command of the Twenty-first regiment, he, with several newly-appointed officers of Ohio and Indiana regiments, dined by invitation, with the late Hon. Daniel Mace, of Lafayette, Ind., formerly a member of Congress from that district. Of course the condition of the country and the probabilities of the war, then just begun, were the chief subjects of conversation among these new soldiers of the Union. The danger of a negro insurrection being under discussion, an Ohio officer declared that, were he in line of battle about to engage the enemy, and the slaves should revolt, he would stop the fight long enough to join the Confederates in suppressing the insurrection and reducing the slaves to obedience. Grant, who sat by his side until then a quiet listener, turned to him and replied: "Colonel We—I don't want to interrupt you or hurt your feelings; but I must tell you that a man who can express such a sentiment as that is not far from being a traitor, and an unsafe man to lead our soldlers." Colonel W. was deeply exasperated under this telling rebuke, but Grant was firm, and it was only through the pacific interposition of Major Mace that a personal difficulty was averted. The foregoing incident was related by Major Mace to a company of friends at Lafayette, in the winter of 1865-6, just after his appointment by Mr. Johnson to the office of Postmaster at that place, and we have it from an officer who heard him make the statement.—Quincy (Ill.) The Reported Tendency to Insanity in Ex-Gov, Seymour's Family. The tendency to insanity in the family of the The tendency to insasity in the family of the Democratic candidate for the Presidency has got into discussion in the papers. In one view of the case of course, nobody would refer to it. Had the terrible calamity fallen upon but a single member of the family affording no ground for suspecting a general tendency, the single case would not be brought before the public. A gentleman who has long resided in Utica told us (and we wrote it down at the moment) that Mr. Seymour's father killed himself in a fit of insanity; his mother was thereafter insane for ten or more years, and until her death; a brother of his father killed himself while insane; and an aunt of his father did the same. Residents of Utica say that there have been times when Mr. Seymour's friends feared the effects of further agitation, that there have been times when Mr. Seymour's friends feared the effects of further agitation, and he sought diversion by excursions away from society, to avoid the possible danger. And they say also that if it be a fact that Mr. Seymour desired to avoid the nomination, as some of them believe, it was because he dreads great and prolonged excitements. The truth or falsity of all this can be easily ascertained. We received the statement weeks ago from citizens of Utica who have easily ascertained. We received the statement weeks ago from citizens of Utica who have known Mr. Seymour ever since he became prominent. We regret it all, because it is preferable that the campaign be fought and decided upon the issues between the great parties. But if the allegations are correct, we submit that they form a valid objection to his election.—Hartford (Conn.)

That I was much surprised at what now ever the control of the control so kindly and voluntarily taken in the matter of the Kimberly suit. That I was much surprised at what now appears to be the action of Messrs. Kimberly's attorney in return for uniformly courteous, and just treatment of the Kimberly Brothers when I was in command in Virginia, I need not say. In saying that this was a specimen of Rebel claims I meant precisely that for doing what I believed to be my duty I had been sued by Rebels'and their sympathizers, as I did not doubt then this to be, and as your note, with extracts from Mr. Kimberly's letter, assures me is the fact, that the suit was thus instigated. Messrs. Kimberlys whom I had supposed to be, and during the war had treated as Union men, seemed to have changed, and I took this suit as evidence of the change. Something ought to be pardoned to the natural irritation at finding myself sued and that suit telegraphed over the country, "for extortion," as if I had been guilty of naing my power for private gains. I am glad upon the whole that the suit was brought by these rascally attorneys, for any attorney is a rascal if he brings an unauthorized and usuat suit; as Mr. Kimberly says his lawyers have for the purpose of injuring a political opponent, as it illustrates the characters of all of them. Addison, who brings this unfounded suit without the authority of his clients, says in his card explaining it he is a true Union man. A Portuguese proverb says: "Hell is paved with good intentions." That pavement will be trodden largely by just such barratrious lawyers and Union men as he and his associate Brent are shown to be I shall take leave to publish your letter, and will sak that the inserted in the American. Very truly yours.

Central Committee, Ballimore, Mu. In the event of the declension of Hon. Ginery Twitchell to become a member to represent the Third District in the Forty-first Congress, no more suitable person could be selected than Hon. J. Lothrop Motley. The eminent abilities of this gentleman, his high scholarly attainments, his thorough knowledge of all matters pertaining to State craft, and his personal standing and unblemished reputation, peculiarly fit him for the post. As Mr. William Whiting daclines to he mentioned in connection with the position, no more eligible candidate could be selected than Mr. Motley.—Boston Traneller, Aug. 20.

CAMPAIGN ITEMS.

-Here is a bit of revolutionary talk from Georgian orator named Ramsey: "Georgia has passed through a fiery ordeal. Some of her children, during the war she was compelled to wage, deserted her and joined her enemies. Let them be like Arnold, forever accursed. We have seen our soldiers fall, our cities in flames We have seen our soldiers fall, our cities in flames and our citizens torn from their peaceful homes. We looked upon it unmoved and unblanched. But we can bear it no lonzer. We will now, at all hazards, recover our lost liberties, and restore the State. We are in the midst of a great revolution, which may end peaceably at the ballot-box, but if not, then the true men of the South will rally once more around their now folded banner, and will try the issue at the cartridge-box. Remember the ancestors from whom you sprung. There are men in the North who are now truly with you, and n the North who are now truly with you, and in the North who are now truly with you, and who will, in such a conflict, if necessary, lead your battalions. We did not make the other war. It was forced upon us. We simply stood for the rights for which our fathers bled. And we will stand there again, come peace or war."

—Some of the Democratic leaders are finding out that chasing Congrel Great is reasonable. —Some of the Democratic leaders are finding out that abusing General Grant is unpopular. In a speech delivered yesterday at Augusta, Mc. Mr. Pendleton paid a high and well deserved compliment to the General, who, said the orator, thas been intrusted with great powers and has never betrayed his trust." Will the Democratic and the second in courteen and truthfulners. press take a lesson in courtesy and truthfulness from Mr. Pendleton?

-Republican prospects are improving in California. It is said that there has been a "reaction" from the extraordinary popularity of Gov. Haight, who has become the best "haighted" nan in the State.

—Forty Hebrews of Evansville, Ind., have signified their purpose to vote the straight Republican ticket.

THEATRES, Etc.

The Walnut.—The Black Crook will be given for the last time this evening. On Monday, Mr. Leftingwell, the well-know burlesque actor, will appear at the Welnut. This gentlemen brings with him an enviable reputation as a first-class artist in his peculiar line. He has played long and very successful engagements in New York city, where he is an established favorite. There can be no doubt of his popularity here, if the reports representing the superior excellence of his performances are true. Of this we have no doubt. It is impossible that any one should have drawn growded houses even in New York have drawn crowded houses, even in New York city, night after night, through a whole season, unless he had genuine talent. Mr. Leffingwell comes here with high endorsements, which enti-tle him to consideration, and we recommend our play-going readers to give him a hearing. THE WALNUT.—To-night the Black Crook will be given with all the handsome effects, ballets, —A joker in San Francisco recently appropriated a horse in the middle of the night, and charged about the city, calling up hotel keepers and hackmen with the intelligence that the steamer Golden Age was coming up the harbor. In this way he secured many free drinks. The hackmen waited at the wharf, and the hotels kept open until morning, but no steamer appeared. Meantlime the joker was picked up, very drunk, and the next day prosecuted for

Grant's Generalship Army Officers
Deneunce His Assallants,
[Special Despatch to the Philadelphia Svening Building] Washington, Aug. 22.—The articles on Grant's

generalship in the New York World, purporting to have been written by a Corps commander under him, are read with astonishment in military circles here. Army officers generally denounce them; for one reason, that they think no Corps commander in the late war would disgrace himself by writing anonymous letters, assailing the character of his chief, when any argument would have so much more weight supported by the proper signature of the writer. It is generally believed these articles emanate from some camp follower or disgraced officer, who has felt the rigor of Gen. Grant's discipline.
