BIRTH AND CHARACTER. M. le Comte Henri de Rochefort de Lucay is a gentleman born, and-an incident not so rare as many suppose—he has something the gentleman in him over and above mere birth. He has almost the pride of the rand signeur. If his present success is lead-ng him assuredly to fortune, we must not forget that, so far from dreaming of making a speculation out of the Lanterne, he has on he contrary never thought of anything but to create a little enterprise where he might make a living in freedom and beyond control. He sacrificed a brilliant and certain situation to the rigidity of his principles. Where he only thought of finding mediocrity solaced with freedom, he has hit upon independence small spirits approach him, he takes every pains to appear humble. Nothing provokes him like a piece of detailed eulogium. He receives criticism with open arms, saying in perfect good faith, "Ah, I thought so myself the moment I read it over." When a lively story is told him, he laughs freely but not noisily. He loves to re-narrate the anecdotes be been reversely follows: e hears, never failing to credit them to the prices than in this country. Through the influence of Mr. Ames, they were brought to this country, talks just as he writes, with the same wit, the same life, the same impulsion. He dresses both elegantly and simply; he follows the mode, but with a reasonable interval. HE PRESENTS THE CANDLESTICK TO THE —the Swiss Navy (1) let us suppose—a Gene-yan admiral came to leave his card for Rochefort, announcing that he would return in the evening. "Ah," said Rochefort, on entering, "I am to have all Switzerland on my hands: but, if historians have their rights, so have geographers, and I have expressed nothing but models were made the perfect images that geographical facts, and I won't answer to my friend Switzerland—I'll refuse!" Then he sat down at his desk, crossed his legs, and rolled up a cigarette: his favorite attitude for reflection.

Suddenly an idea crossed his brain.

Suddenly an idea crossed his brain.

"But suppose this man should proceed to something violent! Morbleu! I'll be armed!"

And he goes and takes from the mantel a magnificent bronze candelabra. "If I'm attacked, here is my weapon!" he observed to himself—and waited.

The "Swiss" admiral presented himself.

While this is no doubt the finest and largest piece of bronze work that has ever been done in this country, the art is being brought to a perfection here nearly equal to that in Europe, and every year adds to the list of experienced workmen, the most skilled of which are employed at the Ames Company's works. Not less than one hundred persons. Rochefort amorously eyed his candelabra.

The marine gentleman said, "Sir, I have not come to dispute with you, but the contrary; I greatly like your character and your talent. You will then please me excessively if you will be kind enough to follow my explanations." Rochefort listened politely. The sailor developed his views, and took his leaves the purpose of a ventilator. The eave, clasping Rochefort's hand. out, 'would you like a pledge of my sincerity? If some bidder goes higher, he begs to see it once more, for the time. "It's a very nice bit," he says, returning the specimen. Then he never thinks anything more about it.
You know he wrote, in conjunction with Albert Wolff, a tearing farce in three acts, The Mysteries of the Hôtel des Ventes.' ochefort has quantities of friends among around him by the law which brings wit to wit and gaiety to gaiety. Théodore Bar-rière, Adolphe Choler, Siraudin and Ernest Blum are his intimate companions. They defend the glory of Rochefort more hotly than their own reputations. He is their hero. The Case of Commissioner Mollins.

The Washington despatch to The Press says:

The affidavits on which the warrants for the arrect of Commissioner Rollins and Deputy Commissioner Harlan and others were issued were careful by a man named McHenry, in New York, and Bollictor Binckley. McHenry swears that Murray, the ex-inspector, who has also been arrested, admitted to him that he (Harlan) either directly or indirectly, he canitor remember which, induced him to influence their official opticial. Binckley says he has heard this statement, and, in the wonderful legal phrascology for which he is noted, adds that he believes Rollins and Harlan took money "for the purpose of procuring themselves to be bribed in their offices." The basis for these affidavits, and the consequent lesue of the warrants, is so slight, and in fact such a transparent humbug, that both Messrs. Rollins and Harlan have decided not to respond to the warrants in person, believing as they do that the case will be dismissed on its original tothe engineer; for I well knew that if H. should discover me and signal to the engineer; for I well knew that if H. should become aware of my perilous situation he would stop the train and take me off. My fears were groundless. The strong glare of the head "Passing the last crossing with a rush and a roar, we sped on through the suburbs, and into the open country. The city lights disappeared one by one in the distance, and we were fairly on our way. It was a wild night. The light of the moon struggled with difficulty through the dark clouds which were driven before a strong wind from the southwest. Now and then an opening would illumine the landscape with a sudden burst of silvery light, to be immediately followed by almost total darkness as the heavy cumuli rolled up in masses of inky blackness. The cone of light from the dazzling lens above me The Case of Lommissioner Rollins. some of the flagmen at the street crossing hemselves satisfied with this course, and are out cone of light from the dazzling lens above me spoken in their disgust at the farce. The latter indignantly deales that he authorized or sent Binckley to New York, and thereby arises a question of veracity between them, as Binckley claims to have possession of letters from Mr. would then cut the darkness in its onward rush with startling clearness. Now flashing up the rocky sides of some mountain gorge, illuminating rock, tree and shrub with almost daylight distinctness; anon losing itself in the claims to have possession of letters from Mr. Johnson recommending him to interested parties. It is known that Fitch, the Michigan lobbylst who originated the scheme, obtained an interview with the President, detailed to him the particulars of McHenry's statement, which were taken down by the official steno grapher of the White House, and subsequently referred to Binckley. The latter, either presuming that he had sufficient authority, or, as he claims, obtaining it from the President, immediately started for New York, taking Fitch with him. The result is known and can be classed with Binckley's characteristic blunders. surrounding darkness as we emerged into the open country beyond; then shooting along the rails ahead, making them look like glistening threads until they disappeared in the darkness threads until they disappeared in the darkness beyond.

'Mile after mile we sped along. I had become somewhat used to my strange position, but it required constant attention to prevent my feet from slipping from the lower bar of the frame on which I was standing. At best I had but a partial foothold, and the constant jar of the engine on the short curves would almost throw me off. In passing through the S. mountains the road was very rough and crooked. The ponderous engine on merchandise generally. nckley's characteristic blunders. The Associated Press despatch says: New York, that the warrants issued by United States Commissioner Gutman, at the instance of Solicitor Binckley of the Internal Revenue Barcan, include one for the arrest of Commissioner Rollins. The understanding in the Internal Revenue Barcan is that he is charged with dishonest transactions in connection with ex-Collector Smith and others. The Commissioner regards the proceedings against him as founded along with now and then a sudden side lurch in its seemingly mad effort to plunge into the black chasms which yawned on every side. In one of these sudden movements the buckle of my strap broke, and I was only saved from instant death by wedging my lector Smith was removed on his recommendation, Haggerty's distillery sold under his instruction, and of the remaining two persons one was dismissed the service as inspector for cause, and the other denied reappointment by him after a trial of sixty days.

Commissioner Rollins has telegraphed to New York that he will not appear either personally or by counsel in answer to the warrant issued for his arrest at the instance of Solicitor Binckley. The reason for this is understood to be the entire absence of facts on which to found the charge against him. The Evening Star says the Freeldent and Secretary McCulloch seem to be really annoyed at the proceedings, and the President ent his private secretary this afternoon to Mr. Rollins to explain that the affair was not of the President's instigation, and he regretted its President and Secretary McCulloch seem to be really annoyed at the proceedings, and the President sent his private secretary this atternoon to Mr. Rollins to explain that the affair was not of the President's instigation, and he regretted its occurrence. Deputy Commissioner Harlan also declines to go to New York in obedience to the points. Twenty minutes more and I should be safe.

"We had now passed the mountains, and the road became straighter and smoother. As The Ledger's Washington correspondent telements we emerged from the tunnel on the spur of A rumor was in circulation here to-day that a warrant had been issued in New York for the arrest of Mr. Rollins, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, based upon the affidavit of Mr. Blackley, Solicitor of the Internal Revenue Bureau. Upon inquiry, it is found that this rumor is true to glare with demoniac fierceness. Although in part; that is to say, an affidavit has been made by Mr. Binckley and another party in New York, in which Mr. Rollins was charged with collusion with ex-Collector of Internal Revenue Smith, of the Eighth District of New York, Mr. Harland, Deputy Commissioner, and others, in an attempt to prevent the collection of revenue tax, etc., etc. to glare with demoniac fierceness. attempt to prevent the collection of revenue tax, in an etc., etc.

It seems the affidavits were made yesterday, but no warrants were issued for the arrest of Messrs. Rollins and Harland. The affidavits were based upon hearsay testimony, charging the efficirs named with an arrectment to permit a distillery business to be conducted in New York, contrary to the provisions of the law for the consideration of one thousand dollars per week, and that this agreement had been in existence for more than three months.

Mr. Binckley does not in his affidavit specify particular acts of malfeasance on the part of Mr. particular acts of malfeasance on the part of Mr. Rollins, but his affidavit is accompanied by the affidavit of another party, who has been in the revenue service, but discharged therefrom, setting forth substantially that ex-Collector Smith, of the Eighth District of New York, had acknowledged that one thousand dollars per week-Machinery, Ibon. &c. The question is likely to come up in a legitimate manuer upon the return of Judge Cadwalader to resume the sitting of his court, either by writ of quo warranto by the government, on the relation of Mr. O'Neill, or some other legal form. If the court should finally decide as a judicial question that Mr. O'Neill is not the lawful attorney of the United States, it may present an embarrassing point for the decision of the Executive Department of the Government whether he should be communicated with as, a law officer of the United States.
