The Late Fight with the Indians in Karasus.

Fort Wallace, Kan., Sept. 27.—Chief scout Horn has just arrived from Col. Forsyth's camp, on the Delaware fork of the north fork of the Republican river. He reports that Colonel Carpenter, who started from near Cheyenne Well, on the morning of the 24th, reached Col. Forsyth on the morning of the 24th, reached Col. Forsyth on the morning. He saw no Indians on the way other than the bodies of eight or nine warriors, evidently killed in the fight, nearly twenty miles away.

They saw six or eight of these on scaffolds, and on each were one of more bodies. The command which left here on the 24th under Col. Bankhead, with provisions, supplies, &c., arrived soon after Col. Carpenter. They were attacked on the way by a party of Indians, who watched their stock, but did not get any of it.

Colonel Forsyth lost five killed and twelve wounded and all his horses. The Indian loss was about eighty killed and wounded, besides a large quantity of stock.

The fighton the first day is described as being the formation of the command of the company of the command of the comm about eighty killed and wounded, besides a large quantity of stock.

The fight on the first day is described as being the most desperate that has ever taken place on the plains. The Indians making charge after charge; sometimes coming within fifty teet of the men. The island on which they were, having only a few bushes, and there being but a small amount of grass, the men lay almost entirely exposed, their only defence being little sand breastworks, which were thrown up with no tools but their bonds. Working between the attacks. works, which were thrown up with no tools but their hands, working between the attacks by the Indians, who rode around charging down upon them. At the same point, one part of the men were digging, while the rest fought the savinges, who were Sioux, Cheyennes and Arrapahoes, numbering six to seven hundred, well armed with Spencer carbines and Henry rifles. It is estimated they fired about ten thousand rounds, besides a large quantity of arrows, the ground being thickly strewn with the latter.

The scouts saw trails of large parties, driving many horses and mules, going South and East.
