Colonel Snowden—I skin after the Court adjourns.
Justice Thompson—I want to say one thing. This is a very nonean application. My prother Snarswood has been on the bench 25 years, and I have been for 16 or 17 years, and this the first time we ever heard of such an application. The Constitution of the State provides for the appointment of the Prothonota y under the same high responsibilities as it provides for the election of the Judgs. His dulles are marked out. He is to keep a record of the court and if there is one thing more important on earth, it is the safe keeping of these records. The Government bond market opened steady, but afterwards became heavy and declined about % to % por cent, under the pressure of heavy sales by the beare. The leading dealers seem disposed to leave the market alone, and some of them have heavy orders to buy as soon as they deem advisable. There is an active borrowing demand for the leading bonds.

The money market was more active, and call loans ranged from 4 to 5 per cent, with transactions at 6 per cent, and by some stock firms acceptionally at 7 per cent, late in the day. Mr. Lewis Wain Smith said that in the interest of the clients he and his colleagues represented he argod that permission be granted to inspect his record before it is made up. If the Court will permit our clients will be willing to send clerks to copy, or pay any fees to the Prothometery the Court may direct, so that they can obtain the list to be used provious to election It is not intended to imply that the process of naturalization in this Court has been conducted/irrogiarly, but in the large number of naturalizations granted it is inevitable that there will be some instances of fraud. Justice Sharswood—I can only repeat what I have gaid before. The Prothonotary is the legal custodian of the papers of the court, and we can give him no order to endanger the papers. It cannot be expected that the papers can be placed in the hands of, strangers, for they may be abstracted, and then there would be naturalization napers outside without a corresponding record in the office. The prothonotary is responsible for the papers and it is for him to say in whose hands he will entrust them. He might, I think, allow the papers to be examined in the presence of one of his clerk.
