After the reading of the supplemental answer of Colonel J. Ross Snowden, Prothonotary, in the proceedings in the Supreme Court relative to naturalization papers yesterday, the argament for the petitioner was opened by Lewis Wain Smith, Esq., who said: I deem it unnecessary to refer to the importance of the question which your Honor has been hearing for the last was conducted in their court, and stated that fourteen or afficen persons had been arrested on the preceding evening, claiming to reside in Catagoria, and to have been naturalized. An investigation had shown that these men had come to the country at mature age, some thirty years of age, and most of them over fifty, and yet had papers declaring that they had come in under eighteen. One of these men was now in court, and prepared to state under onth the way in which naturalization papers were obtained.

W. G. Russell was then called by Judge Allison and asked if he had not charge of swearing the people applying for papers in this court? To which him.

Judge Allison—Did you read the petition to people applying for papers in this court? To which him.

Judge Allison—Did you read the petition to those who was as minors' papers.

W. G. Russell was then called by Judge Allison and asked if he had not charge of swearing the people people applying for papers in this court. To which him.

Judge Allison—Did you read the petition to him or the oath? A.—No, str. 1 enly asked him if the contents were true, but did not tell him or any of the contents were true, but did not tell him or any of the means and the swear and the west of the problem.

The papers were handed to the Judges, and are those known as minors' papers.

The papers were handed to the Judges, and are t which your Honor has been hearing for the last few days. The rights of the citizen and the elec-tive franchise are prized so highly, that when the elightest attempt is made at infringement then the matter becomes one of the most vital importance, and especially so when the courts are made the cloaks to cover up the frauds, when the seal of the court is at tached to fraudulent papers, as in this case. He then reviewed the testimony at length, asserting that the theory started that the expers in question may have been put that the papers in question may have been put upon the person of Devine by some one else was unsupported by the testimony of any one, save Devine himself, who swears positively that he never had these papers, never had a pistol, nor any knowledge or recollection of them. In answer this, we have the sworn testimony of two po-co officers, who discharged their duties as faithful public servants. He is put in prison, his friends enter heavy ball for him, and in a day or two aftewards he comes into court on the mere notice in a newspaper. The assertion is preposterons. But, granting that these papers were put upon the person of Devine by some one else, how does that exonerate Colonel, Snowden. We do not believe that Colonel Snowden is criminally consected with this feared but that he may have been negligent in the discharge of his duties, which, in a public officer, approaches nearly to minic cach case myself.

Mr. Cassidy said that thirty-seven papers were obtained in the same way as that of Mr. Taite, and that he had a number now in his hand brought into Court by Alderman White, of the brought into Court by Alderman White, of the WILLIAM L. JAMES, General Agent Queen Street Wharf n which his official conduct is to be the subjec of praise or blame; a proceeding which charges gross negligence in his official conduct, and it is my duty to show the Court that there is no ground or foundation for the allegation. It is admitted, better, it is proved, that same kind, which he desired the Court to dispose is admitted, better, it is proved, that the name of James Ross Snowden attached to those twelve papers is not the writing of the Prothonotary, and that he has no knowledge of it. We are thus narrowed down to the scaling. Those impressions must either have been made in the office or in one of the ways detailed by the witness. A very probable theory is that that impression may be a simulated impression; but, be it simulated or genuine, there is not a particle of testimony that those impressions were made through the negligence or omission of Col. Snow-which, is a public officer, approaches nearly to criminality.

He then took up the testimony of each witness, arguing that, in part as well as in whole, the evidence disclosed such great negligence in the conduct of the Prothonotary as to call for the restlection of the Conrt; as the only thing that could be collected from the evidence was that they must have been criminally signed and scaled and removed by some of the clerks, or that they had been stolen after being signed and scaled in the Office.

George W. Biddle, Esq., in reply said that he proposed to confine himself as closely as he could to the matter before the court.
