GREAT FIRE IN HARRISBURG.

Coal Oil Cars Burned. The Harrisburg State Guard of yesterday had following fuller particulars of this fire: Last evening, about half-past nine o'clock, an darm of fire was raised in the upper part of the city, caused by the burning of two oil cars just above the Pennsylvania Round House. Viewed from the city, an extensive configuration ap-peared to be raging. The different fire bells were rung, railroad whistles sounded, and soon an imrang, railroad whistles sounded, and soon an immense throng were rushing to the locality. The firemen, as usual, were promptly on hand, and soon in active service, but the streams of water seemed to have little effect on the burning fluid, and it raged with unawated fury, throwing out an immense heat, until it had exhausted The fire originated from a globe lautern used by one of the men while transferring the oil from one tank to another. It appears a leak had been decovered in a large from tank lying near the Round House, and orders were issued by Super-ntendent Black that the oil should be transferred to a car containing three wooden tanks, with express instructions that no fire should be used. In violation of these orders a lan-tern was brought into service, from which combustion was caused, and the flames spread with the greatest rapidity, realsting all efforts to check them, communicating to both cars, and extending to the lumber which lay scattered in the vicinity. The car and three tanks were totally consumed, and the iron tank, together with the car, rendered complete wrecks. A large quantity of lumber was also destroyed. The oil was consigned to parties in Philadelphia. Loss of a Western Steamer. [Despatch to the Missouri Democrat.]

CAIRO, Oct. 11.—Last night at eieven o'clock the steamer Nightingale, from Cincinnati for St.
Louis, struck the rocks near the head of Grand Chain, in the Mississippi river, and was immediately headed for shore, where all the passengers, two hundred in number, and sixty horses, were safely landed. All the pumps on boards being started immediately on the occurrence of the ac-cident, she was kept from sinking near an hour, so that nearly all the deck cargo, consisting prin-cipally of household goods belonging to the pasengers, were saved.

Owing to the coolness and good arrangements of her officers, there was no excitement among the great crowd of people on board the Nightingale, and by the time the boat reached the landing the women and children were all ready to go The boat sunk in about one hour, and now lies opposite Thebes, with the water nine feet deep on the starboard and the same on the larboard side. Ocr. 13.—The gold market has to-day shown more steadiness than usual of late, and the fluctuations were from 137% to 138, with the closing

The steamer Hammonia took out $85,000 in pecie and the Sub-Treasury disbursed $3,065 in coin in payment of interest on the public debt during the day. The further advance in the rates of foreign exchange excited no material influence in the Gold Room, owing to the great mass of operators being committed to the "short" interest, and therefore disposed to ignore as far as possible everything calculated to promote an advance in the premium.
