"BEEF! BEEF! BEEF!"

In his traveling orations on the financial topics of the day, Mr. Seymour reminds us of the amusing story related by Mr. Wirt in his life of Patrick Henry of one John Hook. According to Mr. Henry, Hook also became a candidate for the county court. Like Mr. Seymour, he was a well-to-do-man, in respectable position and of a good deal of property, and so Mr. Seymour has been very loyal to the national cause in the recent political struggle, so Hook was supposed to be not wellaffected to his country in the great struggle from which the Union has emerged at the close of the Revolution. In the effort to feed the army at that trying period, a contractor applied to Hook for a lot of steers, and as he was not in favor of granting supplies,—here is another point of resemblance,—he complained of it exceedingly. Accordingly, so soon as the war was over, he brought suit against the commissary for the trespass, or, perhaps, for the damage. Mr. Henry defended the commissary, and in doing so he made Hook feel as cheap as Mr. Seymour will feel after next Tuesday. He described the suffering and privations of the army; the want of every necessary in their arduous struggle; and of the duty of every good man to aid and cheer them in their trials. But not one word could he get into the disposition; and when the war was over, and every patriot was rejoicing over Yorktown, Washington and independence, Hook marred the general joy by going around with disconsolate croakings about "Beef! Beef! Beef!" Mr. Henry did thinglish such a way as to overwhelm poor Hook with ridicule and confusion, and the jury found for the defendant.

Now, in the present case, Mr. Seymour's notes are all sounding "Beef, Beef!" According to the country is disunited—though not so much so as he wanted it to be. He complains that the rebels, who tried to break up the country, are not permitted to rule it, and wants every one of them to be allowed to vote for himself, as they are all well disposed to do. He groans about the debt which his friends obliged us to borrow in order to carry on the exceedingly gloomy in regard to taxation. In respect to debt and taxation, however, we think Mr. Seymour is hardly as badly off as his prototype Hook actually was. Hook had steers, but we do not know that Mr. Seymour has anything. He says he never lent the Government anything, and never paid any of its bonds, and as for taxation, we doubt if he contributes much. Perhaps in this respect he is like his friend and supporter, Sanford E. Church, who also complained about being "ground down by taxation," when some waggish soul of the vestibule set that the only tax he paid was upon two gold watches! And this reminds us that there is a friend of Mr. Seymour in this vicinity who expressed his unhappiness about taxation, some two or three years ago, when we showed that the amount of his grievance was that he paid an income tax on about 3,000 dollars! The trouble, however, with all these gentlemen, living and dead, Hook, Sanford Church, and the friend here (we will not mention the name) is, that they have no mind for the work. Perhaps if the Constitution was to go to the other side it might be well enough. The truth is, that those who pay the taxes, for the most part, make little complaint of them. They were in favor of suppressing the rebellion, and of providing the means necessary to do it; and now they want to pay the debt, and if needed to do a without grumbling.

But what is Mr. Seymour to do? He has to say something, and he can't talk about the war, or at least the part he took in it, for that is odious to the people. He can't keep that subject in the dark he harps upon the one subject of the finances, the finances, like Hook's "Beef, Beef, Beef!" But it will not avail him: for the people feel that the parsimony of those who carried us through the war are fully capable of managing this question also, and that with Grant at the helm, the ship sailing from the war of the rebellion will be steadily reduced. As Grant reduced the expenses of the War Department, while the ad interim, so will he cut down those of other departments rapidly and largely as the case will admit of.

We shall have Mr. Seymour here to-night, and we suppose he will tell the story over again. It will be "Beef, Beef, Beef!" But it does not make much matter what he says. He can't talk to the Boys in Blue, and he must tell those that go to hear him that they are all going to be ruined; and they will hurrah. If he would go a little further South they would give him the rebel yell. We suppose he will not think it necessary to say anything more to his "friends" in New York, for they don't need it. They can be relied on so long as the "ring" controls the city government. If Mr. Seymour wants some information about "taxation" let him apply there. But as his friends get the benefit of it we suppose he will not make it a subject of complaint.

But seriously, Mr. Seymour's electioneering tour is in every way beneath the dignity of the station he aspires to. Johnson did what he could to degrade it by his harangues from the hall-ends of railway cars, and Seymour belittles his position as a candidate by going around, cap in hand, soliciting votes and dilating upon subjects that the patriotic heart feels is of subordinate importance. He passes over the great question of the salvation of the nation's life at Gettysburg, Vicksburg, Chattanooga, Five Forks and Appomattox, because he really had no sympathy with those by whom the grand deeds at those places were performed. Horatio Seymour is not the man to be placed at the head of a government that he was willing to see destroyed. Our fathers would not have elected John Hook—they preferred Washington—and we will be degenerate sons if we do not prefer Grant to Seymour now.

There are easy, good natured people who ridicule the assertion that the inauguration of a Democratic President would be the signal for a new and more disastrous rebellion. The matter is more serious than amusing. Seymour and Blair are solemnly pledged to overthrow the existing governments in the reconstructed States. No issue in this campaign is more clearly defined than this. While Grant can majorities in both houses of Congress, it will be entirely impossible to do this by repealing the reconstruction acts. It can only be accomplished by force, and with the executive department of the government in active and earnest sympathy with the rebels, who, even now, have resisted the execution of the laws in the Southern States, so that the life of a Union man is not safe for a moment, it is easy to perceive whence this force will be found and what will be its application. We cannot trifle with this matter or treat it with indifference. It is folly to affect to delay that the Democrats have any such design while Frank Blair is declaring it daily from the stump. It will be a sorry day for this country if we disregard the warning of his incendiary promises and give him opportunity to fulfil them.

Wade Hampton is trying the new dodge of a Southern pacificator. But his methods of conciliation are peculiar. In his latest reported speech he assures the negroes that the Democracy are their only friends; that they are willing to have them their equals before the law; that they are free to vote as to their liking; that he "don't tell them they must vote the Democratic ticket." But, if they dare to vote the Radical ticket, "you must go to the cabbages and carpet-baggers will employ them!" In other words, Wade Hampton begs his dear friends, the negroes, to understand that he is their friend and best friend, and that he means to starve them if they dare to vote a Republican ticket.

American citizens coming home to vote for Grant and Colfax, have to run the gauntlet through the streets of Baltimore by special details of armed men. It was just so in 1861. Any man who made it dangerous to pass through Baltimore then, are they not those who now make that city a disgrace to the American name. They are the men upon whose votes Governor Swann relies to put him into Congress, and the men upon whom Mr. Wallace depended for much of his work in his city in our late election. If Baltimore is not soon redeemed from the dominion of the rebel Democracy, the loyal North will have to find some other highway to the National Capital.

District Attorney Mann did a good day's work in his Court, yesterday, and the Democratic lawyers took very little by their motions against him. Messrs. Brooke and Ochlschlager failed to extricate their friend Abraham Williams from his dilemma, and Mr. Brown failed to restore the ex-deputy sheriffs to the "bosoms of their families" in New York. If he had been a Democratic Judge, Mr. Mann would doubtless have consented to compromise by sending them to Brest, one of the favorite resorts for convicts.

Two proclamations have just been issued by the Governor of South Carolina, which are in curious contrast. One applauds Wade Hampton for his efforts to preserve the public peace, and the other revokes a catalogue of Republican private and public citizens, murdered by the Democracy of that State. Wade Hampton and his party have rekindled the flames of murder and civil war throughout the South, in their mad attempts to crush out the advancing sentiment of a true Republicanism, and now they pretend to be alarmed at the conflagration which they have started, and Governor Scott wisely commends them for a mock virtue which they parade for their partizan purposes.

Keep a sleepless eye on the enemy. He will cheat wherever he can. Because he despairs of success by all fair means is no reason that he will not be desperate in his use of foul ones. Watch him at every point. Look out for his false tickets. Look out for his colonizers, and his fraudulent personation. Look out for the arrest every man that accepts an illegal vote. Let the Democracy understand that we mean to have a fair election this year, or the Democratic party has no respect for a pure ballot-box the Republican party has.

I. Newton Brown, Esq., Democratic counsel for the four men on trial yesterday for burglary and deputy-sheriffship, is reported to have said that "he dreaded a policeman more than a highwayman, when he was going home late at night." Rather a singular confession for a member of the bar. It is very much to the honor of honest men to fear the minister of the law, and to prefer the company of its transgressors.

—Governor Seymour is to speak his piece in Philadelphia to-night. He is to assure the people of his great amiability. He is to explain to them that he wanted all parties to vote for him. He is to show them that he will be the most harmless of Presidents, if elected. He is to say nothing to shock the Southern wing of his party. And he is to "push the debt and taxation question." Then he is to go home and give up the ghost, and on his political tomb-stone shall be inscribed:

"I could not be your President!"

General Grant's dignified retirement at his quiet home in Galena, and Horatio Seymour's treadmill round of stump-speaking, are in fine contrast. The next turn of the national wheel will bring General Grant into the high place of Presidential honor, and will send poor Seymour weeping to the retirement of his home.

Five-twenties of 1862 were the only issue which failed so participate in the advance, these having remained steady all day at 113. The issue of 1864, 1865 and 1867 were particularly active and strong, and the indications are that either a disbursement of the November interest the demand for reinvestment will impart buoyancy to the entire list.

The gold market was very steady all day and the fluctuations were from 134¼ to 134⅝, with the closing transactions prior to the adjournment of the board at 3 o'clock at 134¼ against 134⅝ at the opening. Following this the sales continued to be large, 134¼ being the active borrowing demand for coin, but rates tended in favor of the borrower, and loans were made at 1-64@1-32 per cent. per diem and at 1@3 per cent. for carrying, as well as "flat." Interest was paid at 1@3 per cent. per annum for carrying.

The gross clearings amounted to $52,555,000, the gold balances to $1,400,077, and the currency balances to $2,656,446. The Sub-Treasury disbursed $2,624 in coin in payment of interest on the public debt during the day, and sold $200,000 in gold, the bids for which amounted to $900,000, at prices ranging from 134 to 134 25-100 for the last, and the whole amount being awarded to Henry Clews & Co., Wall street, bankers, for Boston, who took out $284,554 in specie, and the steamer Alaska brought $700,000 in treasure from California and $1,300 from Aspinwall.

Minister Hancroft for Grant.

At a dinner party given by the Hon. George Bancroft, one of the guests, Mr. Bancroft said that he regarded it as the best interests of the country that Grant should be nominated and elected. He thought the recent legislation of Congress could be carried out in no other way than by a Democratic President. He could not think it would be safe or expedient for the Democratic party to nominate at present.

Randall's Exactity.

The Tribune of to-day says:

"Of course Postmaster-General Randall has a plan of cooking up the accounts of his Department, so as to show a Democratic deficit. This is the way of it. There are special appropriations of Congress for the Post Office, existing the gap between the expenditures for and the receipts from the postal service. He counts them all in—five and three-quarter millions, in round numbers—and then proceeds to himself over the beast that the remaining deficiency will only be $1,000,000. This is the way to cook up a management the mail service costs, in the year, over six and a half million dollars more than it brings in."

Attempt Upon the Lives of Democratic Editors.

Demopolis, Oct. 29.—While we were canvassing Choctaw and Sumpter counties, several daring attempts were made by parties in disguise to assassinate us. We were threatened with hanging in Choctaw and Livingston. In Livingston a large containing us was fired upon and hit several times. Double-barrel guns and revolvers were used. This occurred in the day-time in the streets. We were saved from a fate worse than death by Republican canvassers have been similarly treated in other counties. We hope to have fair election in many counties without the presence of United States troops.

Bob Law in New Orleans.

New Orleans, Oct. 28.—Last night armed bands of Democrats patrolled the streets and searched Republicans for arms. The winding Republican club rooms and some residences were sacked. Republicans generally remained quiet and concealed. Large numbers have been killed here and in St. Bernard, and now the cry is, peace, but no United States soldier has dared a gun. This morning's newspapers contain the most immediate resignation of the state officers, the departure of the Governor, and that laws which do not suit them shall be trampled under foot. Gov. Wickliffe and his party boldly admit dangers and difficulties. This afternoon General Sickles told the Police Board to remove Superintendent Williamson and appoint Capt. Newcomer, or take care of themselves. They complied, and Newcomer is now Superintendent. Notice by superseding the Republicans. The excitement growing out of the assassination of the evening Gen. Rousseau publishes an address, saying that he was misrepresented in his movements serving the peace. Gen. Rousseau's course is favorable to peace.

A few days before his assassination by the rebels in Arkansas, Congressman Hinds wrote the following letter to Hon. T. D. Eliot, of Boston, Washington:

Little Rock, Ark., Oct. 2, 1868.—Hon. T. L. Talbot, Washington, D. C.—Dear Sir:—Thanks for favors to hand. Since my last we have commenced a vigorous canvass, and you can say to all your friends that Arkansas will be redeemed from the rule of the Democracy. We are terribly in earnest, having the fight of our lives, perhaps, to carry the State, lose it, or die. We are determined to carry it, and Brooks and myself take a trip through the south and west for the next few days, and will not cease work until the day of election. Very respectfully,

"James Hinds."

Supposed Thieves.—Three young men, who gave their names as James Finnegan, Charles Armstrong and James Curtin, and who said that they came from New York, were arrested in West Philadelphia yesterday, while prowling about in a suspicious manner. They made unsuccessful attempts to get into several houses, and from the report of the Lonely Railway Company it is alleged they carried off a blanket belonging to the agent. They were committed by Alderman Mauill. In the possession of one of them was found a pistol and a number of cartridges, and by B. Conrad with George R. Henry's compliments.

In Canal stocks there was a firmer feeling, and Lehigh Navigation sold at 50¾, a gain of a quarter of ⅝.

There was an active demand for Coal shares at full prices.

In Passenger Railroad shares the only change was in Hestonville, which closed at 11⅝ bid.

In Bank shares nothing doing.
