indifferently well who has not had his expe-rience at Philippe's, in the Rue Montorgueil,

Antwerp, in the decline of the poor old Rocher—paying, as the gossips love to relate, eighty francs per head. "Pascal was worthy of the traditions which he took up—worthy of old Philippe, the original and intrepid, whose son he succeeded thirty years ago. Not only the bright and delicate cutsine of the now richly adorned palace of the epicure invites the gournet be-hind the Bourse. There are memories of the past, as well as the temptation of a well-served, quiet dinner in the present. I think, walking to Philippe's, of old Philippe who bough the sly old for, to carry away a huge jar of water wheenop in love for 2100, and who used, the sly old fox, to carry away a huge jar of water repon his head, to make the neighbors believe he was doing an extraordinary business in wine. His ruse brought him business, and he was not the man to sit down content with vines any grapes that have been overlooked.

When the large baskets are full, special workmen, whose duty it is, take them on their shoulders and carry them to a place their shoulders and carry them to a place to surrender an unassailable position their shoulders and carry them to a place to surrender an unassailable position for a possible and very doubtful advantage? Do they believe that if once we wint them to an equality in the wide arena of mite them to an equality in the wide arena of mite them to an equality in the wide arena of mite them to an equality in the wide arena of mite them to an equality in the wide arena of mite them to an equality in the wide arena of mite them to an equality in the wide arena of mite them to an equality in the wide arena of mite them to an equality in the wide arena of mite we shall go back to accept the mild despotiam of their rule at home? I think in this they reach around the vineyard, and in these the grapes are put before being turned into the large hogsheads which takes them to the press.
The vintsgers have two meals a day—the first in the morning, often before going into tumble existence of a man is lilied by. It is, however, into this arena she now wants to come down. I will not deny her capacity for the encounter. We live in an are where there are too many indifferently well who has not had his expe-rience at Philippe's, in the Rue Montorgueit, the busy? Not a pleasant place to reach on winter nights, among the business men and through its full share of Paris mud. But the ground is sacred to classic gastronomy. The steam of full thirty thousand dinners steals along the way. We are by the ancient Ro-cher de Cancale, now gone the way of good the funeral baked meats should be ready, cooked a point) since the Dake of Orleans feasted his eventy officers, after the fall of Antwerp, in the decline of the poor old Rocher-paying, as the gossips love to

In 18.3; Lieutenapit Brooke obtained mind from the bottom of the North Atlantic, between Newfoundland and the Azores at a depth of more than 10,000 feet, or two miles, by the help of his soundiag apparatus. The specimens were sent for examination to Ehrenberg, of Berlin, and Bailey, of West Point, and those able microscopists found that this deep sea mud was almost entirely composed of the skeletons of living organism nature of the bottom, so as to guard against chances of cutting or fraying the strands of that costly rope. The Admiralty conse-quently ordered Captain Dayman, an old friend and shipmate of mine, to ascertain the depth of the whole line of the cable, and to bring back epecimens of the bottom. In former days such a command as this might have sounded very much like one of the impossible things which the young Prince in the Fairy Tales is ordered to do before he can obtain the hand of the Princess. However, in the months of June and July, 1857, my friend performed the task assigned to him with great precision, without, so far as I
