is simpler than the process of supplying ammunition to British troops in action. The only point I am not quite clear about is the proper breadth of margin of the paper on which the necessary requisition should be written, but I have reason to believe that 'half-margin foolscap' is the proper form of thinking so. After the fall of Sebastopol I

16.02 was one day on guard in the Redan, and 18.35 shortly before I was relieved I discovered that one of the unexploded Russian magazines was on fire. I placed my guard and 28.54 sentries in safety, warned the officer who relieved me, and as soon as I returned to camp . 60.21 wrote a hurried report of the circumstance, .102.71 which was returned to me because it was number of unmarried persons at the same age, no less than 1,231 die before attaining the age of 25. And in like manner all the other lines of the table are to be interpreted.

"Commenting on the evidence supplied by the above figures, Dr. Stark stated that backelorhood is more destructive to life than did."

which, in retaining the works at the point of the bayonet. As he was dying he requested me (verbally, not in writing) to send his prayer book to his mother at home, which I did."

the most unwholesome trades, or than residence in an unwholesome house or district, The Southern hunters tell wonderful stories where there has never been the most distant attempt at sanitary improvement of any kind. And this view has been very generally accepted not only by the public, but by professed statisticans. Yet, as a matter of fact, we believe that no such inferences can reasonably be drawn from the above table. He appears to us to have fallen into the mistake, which M. Outstelt table us to some of their exaggerations, which were rewhere there has never been the most distant mistake, which M. Quetelet tells us is so common, of trying to make his statistics carry more weight than they are capable of bearing. It is important that they are capable of sissippi steamer, and did not seem to be doubted as an authentic incident by any one bearing. It is important that the matter should be put in its just light, for the Royal Commission on the Law of Marriage has revealed no more striking fact than that of the prevalence of immature marriages; and such reasoning as Dr. Stark's certainly connect tend to discourse the states to whether ma of them.

The peccary is a creature of the hog species, and is utterly fearless. It pays no regard to rifle balls unless they hit it, and never cannot tend to discourage these unwise alli-ances. If death strikes down in five years only half as many of those who are married as of those who are unmarried at the age of twenty (as appears from the above table), and if the proportion of deaths between the two classes goes on continually diminishing in each successive lustre (as is also shown by the above table), it seems reasonable to infer that the death-rate would be even more strik-ingly disproportionate in the case of persons between the ages of fifteen and twenty than in the case of persons between the ages of twenty and twenty-five. We believe, indeed, that if Dr. Stark had extended his table to the whole company turned upon him, and he at once ran to a tree and sprang into its branches. One, two, three hours passed and yet no help came. He was separated from his friends and did not dare to stir from his that if Dr. Stark had extended his table to include the former ages, the result would have been as we have indicated. In Scotland, however, the proportion of very youthful marriages is probably not sufficiently large to supply the requisite data.

"To many Dr. Stark's conclusion may appear to be a natural and obvious sequitur" bis friends and did not dare to stir from his position. Getting "onessy, both in body and mind, he moved a little to make his seat easier," and, losing his balance, fell. Luckily, he said, he dropped his rifle, and caught hold of a lower branch of the tree and clung to it for his life, with his feet within a couple of wards of "the sile." yards of "the sile."

"This," he added, "was very okkard, and pear to be a natural and obvious sequitur from the evidence upon which, it is founded. Admitting the facts—and we see no reason from the eyidence upon which it is founded. Admitting the facts—and we see no reason for doubting them—it may appear at first sight that we are bound to accept the conclusion that matrimony is favorable to longevity. Yet the consideration of a few parallel cases will suffice to show how small a foundation the figures we have quoted supply for such a conclusion. What would be thought for such a conclusion. What would be thought for such as conclusion. figures we have quoted supply for such a conclusion. What would be thought, for example, of any of the following inferences:—Among hot-house plants there is observed a greater variety and brilliancy of color than among those which are kept in the open air, therefore the housing of plants conduces to the splendor of their coloring. Or again: the average height of Life Guardsmen is greater than that of the rest of the male population, therefore to be a Life Guardsman conduces to tallness of stature. Or to take an example still more closely illustrative of Dr. Stark's reasoning—

The head peccary got on it and jumped up, and seized ms by the heel of the right boot. I kicked at him with my left feot like a horse, and when we were strugglin', the other peccaries rolled from under him, and left him hangin' on to my heel by his tusks, while his friends were a grumblin' away like mad all 'round. They made a most dreadful nize; my arms were gettin' tired; and I began to make up my mind that I'd have to fall and try what a rush would do among them, when crack went a rifle, and down went the biggest peccary. It took me so by surprise that I to be a Life. Guardsman conduces to tallness of stature. Or to take an example still more closely illustrative of Dr. Stark's reasoning—the average longevity of noblemen exceeds that of untitled persons, therefore to have a title is conducive to longevity; or, to borrow Dr. Stark's own words, 'to remain without a flowers are selected for housing, and that Life Guardsmen are chosen for their tallness, so that we are prevented from falling into the mistake of ascribing splendor of color in the mistake of ascribing splendor of color in the additions, was told as a true story of a Texan additions, was told as a true story of a Texan to the inone instance, or tallness in the other, to the in-fluence of causes which have nothing what-ever to do with those attributes; nor is any one likely to ascribe the longevity of our nobility to the possession of a title. Yet there is nothing in any one of the above inferences which is in reality more startlingly of gold, and found myself at a genuine tourmortality bills, when the latter are considered

The London Daily News says:

"The Royal Commission on the Law of Marriage has attracted attention to many singular and instructive results of modera statistical inquiry. Not the least important of these is the apparent influence of marriage on the death-rate. For several years it has been noticed by statisticians that the death-rate of married men and widowers. We believe that Dr. Stark, Registrar-General for Scotland, was one of the first to call attention to this peculiarity, as evidenced by the first to call attention to this peculiarity, as evidenced by the first to call attention to this peculiarity, as evidenced by the first to call attention to the law has since been confirmed by a far wider range of statistical inquiry. The relative proportion between the death-rates of the married and unmarried is not absolutely uniform in different countries but it is fairly in the propers of supplying am-

Wherever there is a man who, because he became the enemy of his country, was subjected to political disabilities, there is a man whom you would have relieved of them as soon as there is proof that he has again become its friend. But on the other hand, you will regard no no man as the friend of his country who wars upon his neighbor because that neighbor is of a race different from his own, or because that the races of men.

I close my letter with saying that I like to cordial recognition of the equal rights of all races of men; by its downright and effective ssertion that no man loses rights by being orn in one skin instead of another; and by faithful, warm-hearted and successful e deavors ; vid our country of this low and brutal an agonism of races. What your Ad-ministration shall be in other respects is of the races of men.
I close my letter with saying that I like to

Lies of the control o believe that the motto of your administration will be: "A man's a man." The spirit of most comprehensive and vital respect, it will be right in every other essential one. No wonder that the Democratic party was in favor of robbing the nation's creditors. The party that can rob a rece of all the rights of manhood, and build and maintain itself on such robbery is nd maintain itself on such robbery, is, of course, capable of every other robbery, is, of cause every other is infinitely less than this sweeping one. I said that this party was in past only. It was not killed by the vote of yesterday. It was killed when slavery was killed. In leaine classes. its indispensable nourishment. Its partia resurrection was only because of the reani mation of slavery. The prospect of this resnimation was blighted yesterday; and this Pro-Slavery Democratic Party has, there-fore, fallen back into its grave, never again to a "Democratic Party" there may, hereafter, be in our country—but no one of them will be a Pro-Slavery Party, and, therefore, no one of them will be like this party, which was killed several years ago, and which lost yesterday all hope of a resurrection. Yester-

arty, either now or hereafter. Most emphat cally true is this, if the measures and influence your Administration shall be withering which, more than all else, begets and fosters your administration, if it maintain the equal rights of all our races of men, will not fail of responding to all the essential claims of jus tice. Of no wrong to the nation's creditors will it be guilty. For universal suffrage it will be unyielding—not merely because, as the right to life, liberty and property is natural, so participation in the choice of those, at whose official disposal these possessions so argely lie, must also be a natural right; but ballot in the hands of those who have re-

ently emerged from slavery can save them South recognized no political rights in black men; and straightway these governments set to work to re-enslave them. It matters not, as regards my argument, that this new slavery was not literal chattel slavery. It had none Ah! but it is vulgar. "They are sour, they are sour, "said the fox when he could not reach at the granes. It is vulgar when the could not reach at the granes. It is vulgar when the could not reach at the granes. It is vulgar when the could not reach at the granes. and was, on the whole, more oppressive Ah! but it is vulgar. "They are sour, they are sour," said the fox when he could not reach a the grapes. It is vulgar when the pride of a refined style of pure English prevents many from using it. If there is vulgarity in it, it is such as the English language cannot produce—not, indeed, on account of its vulgarity, but on account of its true refinement. Let us turn now to the endearing epithets in the Gaelic. Grauh a ghraidh (love my love) the dh almost silent; a ghraidh is equally stroug with "my love" and full of melody; gaol a ghaoil (love, my love, or dear, my dear). "Ghaodh, a ghaoil, do na fearaibh" (M'Lachlan), the most endearing expression which could come from the lips of a man, which the English cannot imitate, and which above all the other good, which will come from the purging of the nation of this malignant and cruel caste-spirit, will be the remo-val thereby of the greatest obstacle in the way of the Christian religion. For the spirit of this religion cannot dwell in the bosom that so much as the spirit of this religion of nature and reason, justice and goods pares the bosom to welcome sound political oles and cultivate sound political sentiwhich the English cannot imitate, and which hats with feathers, and the women in short, it is impossible properly to translate. The nearest approach that can be made to it— roundness from the broad hips down, short that, in the high office to which you were "Thou dearest, or most beloved, or most waist ornamented with chains and barbarous loving of men." How touching Mo ghaolan brooches of white metal, with the oddest head mo ghaolag, the former the diminutive mas-culine, the latter the diminutive feminiae, the with little red or green embroidered, brimless above the stupidity of not being able to change, and above the weakness of being ashamed to change. Indeed, while in your an being the sign of the one, and the ag the sign of the other, and being the same as in broad Scotch affectionate Cheist, a cheist, mo cheistean, mo cheistean, mo cheistean, the inevitable switch cane; porters in red the caps, with a coil of twine about the waist; the constitution thou art the operation their caps, with a coil of twine about the waist; the caps of the caps o formerly you had not been "an abolitionist— not even what could be called anti-slavery"— (the question, thou art the question, thou are my were question, thou are my wars, for coats trimmed with green are not always, or coats trimmed with green are not always, and green felt hats with a suiff on the abolition of slavery, and on there with the food mother? on the abolition of slavery, and on there my child? How shall I comfort him? How diers by the hundreds, of all ranks shall I make him happy? Eudail, m' and organizations, common fellows in blue being no peace which permits the existence eudail, m' eudail bheag—(thou art property, thou art my wee splendent uniforms, clanking their swords as property). Eudail literally means cattle they swagger past. Now and then an elegant the four boxes. letters written in the same month, you reach the altitude of declaring that "Human liberty is the only foundation of human or property of any kind. In further enlarging | equipage dashes by, perhaps the four horses government." Better still is your recent declaration to Mr. Colfax that, in your Presion Gaelic terms of endearment, Mr. Farquof the handsome young king, with mounted harson comes across a word which many a postilions and outriders, or a liveried carriage dency, "we shall have the strong arm of the Executive, representing the will and beginner in the Gaelic will remember with of somebody born with a von before his fear and trembling. The word is laoidh, signifying a calf. It is the shibboleth of the language—the Kyber Pass into the Vale of Cashmere. No Sassenach ever yet got his lips, and his tongue, and his teeth to combine properly in its proposition—for it recurrence with the combine properly in its proposition—for it recurrence with the combine properly in its proposition—for it recurrence with the control of the combine properly in its proposition—for it recurrence with the control of the combine properly in its proposition. majesty of a mighty people, declaring and insuring to every citizen, black or white, rich or poor, be he humble or exalted, the safeguard of the nation, and protecting him from every wrong with the shield of our national strength." But best of all, to prove your discernment and appreciation of human rights and your fidelity to them, was your acceptprinciples of the Republican Party. The grandest of all these principles is not no slavery, but universal suffrage; for the ballot is the mightiest protection of its possessor, not wrong. That universal suffrage is one of the principles of the Republican Party, is manifest from its being set up in the District of inferences may not be pushed beyond the evidence afforded by our facts. In the present instance we have simply to deal with the fact that the death-rate of unmarried men is higher than the death-rate of married men and wildowers. widowers. From this fact we cannot reason as Dr. Stark has done to a simple conclusion. All that we can do is to show that one of three conclusions must be adopted: lither matrimony is favorable (directly or in-
