did it not become during the week a subject of cavil and bitterness. The Americans sit, and have sat for years, quietly in their pews, and have responded cheerfully to the repeated passages introducing the Queen, Prince of Wales, &c., besides hearing uncomplainingly the prayer that Her Majesty may become "victorious over all her enemies," while the English will not permit the name of the Chief Magistrate of the United States to be included in the service. It matters little what great diplomatists do when this rebellious feeling exists. They may keep "war from out our borders" and preserve the blessings of peace, but as to any really ""friendly relations," we fear that the Bishop of London has much more to do to sustain such by the orders he gives to his chaplains than the noble efforts of a Stanley or a Gladstone for the common good.
