Jack-fon was never communicative upon the sub-ject of this duel, and the doctor related it as be heard it from his own uncle, Gen. Thomas Overton, a neighbor and bosom friend, as well as becond in this affair, of Old Hickory. Gen. Jackson and Dickerson's father-in-law, named Erwin, had some misunderstand-taw. challenge was sent. Col. Archibald Overton, who was a brother to the relator of these particulars, and who at that time studied law in Jackson's office, saw the letter of instruc-tion given to the General's second, Gen. T. Overton. It concludes in these words: "Ac-cept no apology; nothing but his blood will satisfy me." Time and place were appointed, and the affair, it seems, was well known in Nashville; for, among other facts to give it publicity, Dickerson offered $500 as a bet that he would kill his antagonist. Jackson's family had no knowledge whatever of the affair. On the appointed day, Gens. Jackson and Overton, without saying a word or creating any suspi-cion about the aim of their journey, started for the rendezvous. Dickerson and his second, Dr. Cattal, were not on the ground, and they young girl was like her, and once when she happened to touch my hand, I felt like the happiest of mortals.
