to itself of a certain right to be compensated and made happy, this writer draws his final argument for the inspiration of the scripture; man neede an immortality, therefore the bible is true. We ourselves think there are better proofs of the divinity of scripture than this one; and though we would not deny a certain transcendental audacity and magnificence to this argument—"we need good tidings! therefore the tidings are true!"—we hardly should have put it, we suppose, as first in our line of proofs. The page (11) on which this plea is entered is likewise the page on which we first notice a theory, repeated more distinctly elsewhere, is which the three dread Constitutents of the Trinity are represented in the widest state of polarity, fulfilling diverse functions, completing or else undoing each other's work, and separately citering the heart of man to support or eject each other. This gentle polytheism may be partly due to a confusion in the mind of the writer between the Redeemer in his fleshly and his eternal person. Jesus, declaring to his disciples the expediency of his "going away," (crucifixion) is in the mind of Mr. Smiley a retiring delty, inaccess and of no benefit to man until the disciples, and of no benefit to man until the disciples, and of no benefit to man until the disciples, and of no benefit to man until the disciples, and of no benefit to man until the disciples, and of no benefit to man until the disciples, and of no benefit to man until the disciples, and of no benefit to man until the disciples, and of no benefit to man until the disciples, and of no benefit to man until the disciples, and of no benefit to man until the disciples, and of no benefit to man until the disciples. mis going away," (crucifixion) is in the mind of Mr. Smiley a retiring deity, inaccessible until the Judgment we might suppose, and of no benefit to man until the disciples, or the modern missionaries who represent them, had effected a special introduction. [Is the Redeemer so narrow at a bargain—did Christ not die for Marcus Aurelius as well as for Constantine?] Continuing the vein of for Constantine?] Continuing the vein of soberness and conscientiousness he well knew sharp distinction between the Personages of God, the author proceeds to a singular effort to belittle the Third or Unmanifested Person of the Tripity who is represented (n. 75) on of the Trinity, who is represented (p. 75) as bon, enriched with notes of a multifarious a temporary agent, to knock, to invite, to intercede, but incapable of "abiding" in the intimately, he wrote the brief, telling memoir soul until the formal entry of the Second Person. Assyrian Poetry-A Discovery. Mr. A. H. Sayre, of Bath, England, writes: "I have, I think, made a discovery of some interest to Assyrian scholars. It has long been a matter of surprise that the cuneiform inscriptions, multifarious as are their contents, have afforded us no specimens of poetry. And yet the Assyrians were mere members guage, we might almost say, is itself poetry.
At last, however, I have found in a hitherto lieve to be a clear example of Assyrian verse. It exhibits all the parallelism of the Hebrew question; the sense of which, with the exception of the words in Italics, may be re garded as well ascertained. I have divided it nto its several stanzas and verses:

National Board of Trade was presented and accepted with a few minor changes. The convention then began with the nomination of Mr. Fraley as president for this year, and he having vacated the chair, John A. Gano, of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, was called to it.
Mr. Gano's name was, however, also proposed for president, and a ballot was called for, which for president, and a band was came for, which resulted in fifty-nine votes being cast for Mr. Fraley and six for Mr. Gano.

The nomination of vice-president was then entertained, which was the subject of some discussion, and on which the convention took a recess WRIGHTSVILLE, PA., Dec. 1, 1868.

Our constitution as it stands is calculated to secure for the board broad nationality, carefully selected, and the presentation of full and fair discussions and impartial action. It guards against everything special, sectional, or political; it aims to bring thoughtful, practical men together once a year, or oftener if necessary, to deliberate as business men and American business men upon the financial and industrial capabilities and exi-gencies of the nation. These leading character-isties of our organization no one, we may be MARINE MISCELLANY.

Schr JC Runyon, Higbse, from Philadelphia for Alexandria, wrecked on Hog Island, registered 182 tons, was built at Wilmington, Del. in 1851, and halled from New York. No maurance on vessel or cargo. The Philadelphia meeting was convened, as has been said, for the practical purpose of bringing the board into existence. It did not afford an opportunity for the examination of many questions of a general commercial character.
Positive action, however, was had in favor of a few important measures: First, the reduction of the tax on whisky to fifty cents per gallon;
second, direct importation to inland cities; third,
the cental measure of all products of the soil;
