Podrilla à la Créole.—A cook from the Fau-bourg Baint-Germain (so she signs herself, and the handwriting is most aristocratic), appreciat-irg my efforts to bring rice into more common use among the laboring classes, has deigned to send me the following recipe. I respectfully send me the following recipe. I respectfully thank ben:

Podrilla is la creok.—Put some nice red haricot beans to coak in some warm water the eyening before they are wanted; then drain the haricots and put them in a sancepan over the fire with chough water to cook the sauce thoroughly however long it may take; add a piece of fat pork, cut in dice, eason with pepper and pottuerbs, and let it cook.

During this time blanche and soften some rice in hot water; stir in some lard, season with ealt and pepper, then form a border of it all around a dish, and pour the haricots in the middle, well cooked, and without the pottherbs.

There, really, you have a homely, substantial dish which eats well and costs almost nothing, and comes in capitally after some little ragout or hash.—Petts Journal.
