After the calling of two additional names that were not answered, the venire was exhausted. Upon a motion by the District Attorney, the Court directed the Sheriff to bring in his wheel and draw therefrom two hundred names from which to select a venire of twenty talesmen, which the mode returnshie this morning. me two letters in which he records his convictions, which are, perhaps, more weighty because the result of most careful consideration, when age had furnished experience and tempered the judgment. "I have, says he, "long and wish such ability as I could command, reflected upon the subject of the Declaration of Independence, and finally have come to the sincere conclusion that universal suffrage was one of the inalienable rights intended to be embraced in that instrument." It is difficult to see how there can be hesitation on this point, when the great title deed expressly says that governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed. But this is not the only instance in which he was constrained by habits of that profession, which he practiced so successfully.

A great Parliamentarian of France has said.—

"The more one is a lawyer the less he is a Sonator," Plus on est grocat minus on est genateur. If or motion of Mr. Sumner the Senate took up Mr. Sanisbury agreed with Mr. Davis.

The resolution was then passed by a vote of 41 yeas to 5 nays. It is in these words:

Resolved, That the people of the United States, aympathizing with the people of Spain in their effort to establish a more liberal form of government, express the condent hope that it will be conducted to the end in such a way as to promote the triumph of liberal institutions; and they carnestly appeal to the people of Spain not to allow the present opportunity to pass without securing the immediate emancipation of the slaves and the final abolition of slavery through ont the Spanish domaion. street. George Toppin, No. 235 Juniper street. John Landis, No. 1884 Rye street. "The more one is a lawyer, the less he is a context or," Plus on est acceat minus on est Senateur. If Mr. Sievens reached his conclusions slowly, it was because he had not completely emancipated himself from that technical reasoning which is the boast of the lawyer rather than of the statesman. The pretension that the power to determine the "qualifications" of voters embraced the power to exclude for color, and that this same power to exclude for color was included in the asserted power of the States to make "regulaont the Spanish dominion.

Mr. Cameron formally aunounced the death of Thaddeus Stevens to the Senate, and rend a brief power to exclude for color was included in the asserted power of the States to make "regulations" for the elective franchise, seems at first to have deceived him; as if it was not insulting to the reason and shocking to the moral sense, to suppose that any unalterable physical condition, such as color of hair, eyes, or skin, could be a "qualification," and if it was not equally offensive to anppose that nuder a power to determine qualifications," or to make "regulations," a race could be disfranchised. such occasions.

Mr. Buckalew addressed the Senate on the resolutions. New England, he said, had given Pennsylvania two men of great distinction, though of unequal merits, Franklin and Stevens. Having spoken briefly of the career of the former, he passed to that of Mr. Stevens, whose character, he said, was one rather for analysis and reflection than for enlogium. As a member of Congress, Mr. Stevens had been a true leader always, never willing to follow. he said, was one rather for analysis and reflection than for cullogium. As a member of Congress, Mr. Exerens had been a true leader always, never willing to follow.

Mr. Morrill (VL) followed with some reminiscences of the deceased, and in a general and favorable analysis of his character, said as we had had but one Franklin and one John Rang-'ph, so we were not likely to have more than one Thanddeus Sievens.

Mr. Sumner—The vicitor, as he paces the corridor leading to the House of Commons, stops with reverence before the marble statues of the men who, during two centuries of English history, adorned that famous Chamber. There are twelve in all, each speaking to the memory as he speke in life; beginning with the learned Selden and the patriot Hampdon; with Yakland, so sweet and loyal in character; Somers, so great as a defender of constitutional liberty, and embracing in the historic group the silver-tongued Murray; the two Pitts, so splendid in mastery; whose speeches contribute to the wealth of E.

Is appose that under a power to determine "qualifications," or to make "regulations," or to make "tregulations," or to make "regulations," or to make "tregulations," or to make "treatment seen the spains than that a technical team between them. Stevens came to his conclusion at the spains than that a technical team between them. Stevens came to his conclusion at the Mr. Summer—The visitor, as he paces the corridor leading to the House of Commons, stops with reverence before the marble statues of the men who, during two centuries of English history, adorned that famous Chamber. There are twelve in all, each speaking to the memory as he spoke in life; beginning with the learned Seider and the patriot Hampden; with Valkiand, so sweet and loyal in character; Somers, so great as a defender of constitutional liberty, and embracing in the historic group the silver-tongued Murray; the two Pitts, so splendid in mastery; Yox, always first in debate, and that other crator whose speeches contribute to the wealth of Elish literature, Edmund Barke.

In the lapse of time, as our history extends, similar monuments may illustrate the approach to our House of Representatives, arresting the reverence of the visitor. If our group is confined to those whose fame has been won in the House are mostly birds of passage only perching on their way to, smother place. Few remain so as to become identified with the House, on their service there is forgotten in the blaze of other service there is forgotten in the blaze of other service there is forgotten in the blaze of other service there is forgotten in the blaze of other service there is forgotten in the blaze of other service there is forgotten in the blaze of other service there is forgotten in the blaze of other service there is forgotten in the blaze of other service there is forgotten in the blaze of other service there is forgotten in the blaze of other service there is forgotten in the blaze of other service there is forgotten in the blaze of other service there is forgotten in the blaze of other service there is forgotten in the blaze of other service there is forgotten in the blaze of other service there is forgotten in the blaze of other service there is forgotten in the blaze of other service there is forgotten in the blaze of other service there is forgotten in the blaze of other service there is forgotten in the blaze of other service be fame of the latter is not that of a Representative alone, for he was already illustrious from various services before he entered the House.

All of these hated slavery and labored for its overthrow. On this account they were a mark for obloquy, and were generally in a minority. Already compensation has begun. As the cause which they upheld so bravely is exalted, so is their fame. By the alde of their far-sighted, far-seching and heroic efforts, how diminutive is The Hill Eurder. OYER AND TERMINEE Judges Brewster and Ludlow.—After the close of our report yesterday the selection of a jury was continued.
Edwin Greble, not being disqualified by oplation or scruple, was selected, but was subsequently challenged peremptorily by the defence.

all that was done by others at the time! How vile the spirit that raged against them!

Stevens was a child of New England, as were Quiney and Adams; but, after completing his education, he found a home in Pennsylvania, which had already given birth to Gliddings. It this great eentral State can claim one of these remarkable men by adoption only, it may claim its best glories.

Two things Stevens did for his adopted State, by which he repaid largely all her hospitality and favor. He taught her to cherish education for the people, and he tanght her respect for human favor. He taught her respect for human favor. He had a favor had some called for correct which would keep him from human favor. He taught her respect for human favor. He taught her respect for human favor. as the receimon assumed its gigantic proportions, he saw clearly that it could be smitten only through slavery; and, when after a bloody struggle, it was too tardly vanquished, he saw clearly that there could be no true peace, except by founding the new governments on the equal rights of all. And this policy he urged with a bin.

William Hamill had conscientious scraples applied punishment, and was challenged rights of all. And this polylocation, which was as beneficent as uncompromising. The robels had burned his property in Pennsylvania, and there were weakings who attributed his conduct to the smart of his lots. How little they understood his nature; Injury provokes and sometimes excuses resentment. But it was not in him to allow a private grief to influence his public conduct. The losses of the iron-master were forgotten in the duties of the statesman. He asked nothing for himself. He did not ask his own rights except as the william Sheppard was next called, and having formed no online that would bias his mind in the statesman. He asked nothing for himself.

Despite the counter attractions in the afternoon and evening, Mr. Carl Wolfsohn's concert in the foyer of the Academy of Music, yesterday afternoon, attracted a very fair audience. Its merit was to great that an audience proportioned to it would have filled the entire Academy. Perto it would have filled the entire Academy. Ferformers, programme and performance were all of the best description. Mr. Wolfsohn's planoplaying needs no eulogy. It has a local reputation, and in other cities his talent has equal recognition. Mr. Hennig, is without donbt the most accomplished violoncellist in this city. In many respects he is equal to the very best we have had at any time. Mr. Colonne holds about the same rank among violinists. His execution man models and theories. With this combination of able artists it was quite impossible that the entertainment should not have been of the most enjoyable character. The programme contained classical and popular selections, and a representative piece or two from that brilliant new romantic ethool, of which Mr. Wolfsohn bravely has made himself the apostle. A Beethoven sonato played charmingly by Wolfsohn and Colonne preceded a violencello solo by Hennig—consisting of a romance by Raff and a cavatina by Goltermann. Mr. Hennig displayed immense power and great depth of feeling in his performance. Mr. Wolfsohn followed with a Chopin jantasis in F minor, magnificently played. A violin solo by Mr. Colonne gave great satisfaction, and the concluding Bargiel trio—the crowning glory of of the concert—won well-deserved applause. It is, as we have already said, a composition of
