THE AT. THOMAS TREATY. The Washington correspondent of the New The Washington correspondent of the New York. Time says:

The documents in connection with the St. Thomas Treaty are all of a confidential character, but so much has recently been said about them in private conversation here, that some of their leading points may be given. It appears that negotiations for the purchase of the Danish islands were begun four years ago, during Mr. Lincolt's administration, when Mr. Seward made proposals for them, saying they were wanted by our our country for a newal station. The Danish Minister did not think at all favorably of the proposition, but of course forwarded it to his Government. From the King of Denmark, through his Foreign Scretary, there soon came answer that the islands were not for sale and that it was not considered advisable to entertain the proposition. Then followed the death of Mr. Lincoln, the accession of Mr. Johnson and a change in the Danish home Government, and in the fall of 1865. Mr. Seward renewed his proposal. New influences were about the King of Denmark, and he replied to the effect that while he still had no desire to sell, the United States might make it for his pecuniary advantage to do so. A period of silence or inaction seems to have followed. But in 1866, just as the Danish Minister was going home on leave of absence, Mr. Seward put into his hands a letter, in which he offered $6,000,000 for the three islands. This was duly laid before the King of Denmark, and he made answer that the price was not sufficient. In the winter of 1866 Mr. Fred. Seward made his trip to St. Thomas, and when he returned our Secretary of State was more than ever auxious to buy the islands, and in the spring of 1867, our Secretary of State was more than ever auxious to buy the islands, and in the spring of 1867, the matter began to take the shape it finally assumed. The Danish Government from the first, as the correspondence shows, was very loth to as the correspondence shows, was very loth to negotiate, and seems to have sometimes doubted whether Mr. Seward would be sustained by the legislative branch of the Government. The Secretary, however, represented that the Executive had complete right to make the treaty; that there was no doubt of its ratification by the Senate, and that the House and the country would approve the action of the Senate. The Secretary of the Navy had formally recommended the purchase of the islands. The Assistant Secretary was a strong advocate of the treaty. Two or three prominent Senators had declared for it. Mr. Thad. Stevens had made a speech in the House showing his condidence in Secretary Seward, and had carried that body with him on an important question of money. The fact that the negotiations were going on had The fact that the negotiations were going on had become public, and was commented upon by our newspapers without hostility to the idea of purchase, and the Danish Minister finally became persuaded that the country really wanted the islande, and that Mr. Seward was correct in the islande, and that the country really stones be the islande, and that Mr. Seward was correct in his view that that the treaty would at once be ratified as a matter of course. This being the situation it was not difficult to reach an understanding, and our offer of seven and a half millions was accepted. The Danish Government refused, however, point blank to sign the treaty unless the people of St. Thomas were willing to be transferred to the United States being moved to this refusal by considera-

Mr. Summer, and there is reason to believe that it is entertained by other Congressmen of both branches. It is pretty certain that the subject will be discussed before the end of the session, in open as well as in secret Senate proceedings.

they had no wish to self. They have earlied under long their part of obligations entered into after long negotiation, and they now ask that we shall meet our part of the bargain to which they consider our national honor has been pledged by the Administration acting through Mr. Seward The Secretary admits the force of this view, so does Mr. Sumper, and there is reason to believe that

The Herald of this morning says: Another very heavy bond robbery was revealed to the police yesterday, the victims this time being Messrs. Cambreleng & Pyne, of No. 14 Wall street, and the amount stolen being the comfortable little sum of $135,000. It seems that on New Year's eve the office of the firm in question was closed as usual, and every precaution taken to prevent any thief from every precaution taken to prevent any thier from celebrating the new year by taking anything of value from the place. Among other thiugs which were carefully looked after were the two safes of the establishment. In one of them two tin boxes, one of them containing $100,000 and the other $35,000 in bonds, were $100,000 and the other $35,000 in bonds, were stowed away and the safe locked, the key used in locking it being placed in the other safe, which was also afterwards locked. On New Year's day the porter of the establishment kept good guard over the place, and—it is charitable to suppose—the police did likewise, and no person was seen to enter or come out of the office during the day. Saturday morning the doors were opened as usual, when every thing to all outward appearance seemed in apple-pie order. The safe containing the key of the second safe was opened and the key found; but when the other safe, had been opened the surprise of everybody may be imagined when it was discovered that the two the boxes had disappeared. There were no marks of violence about the sufe, no traces of a jimmy or other burglarious instrument, so the clerks were left to conjecture among themselves how the boxes got out, and with about as much success as is said to have attended the king in dumpling.

It is almost needless to state that the greatest excitement prevailed in the office when the loss of the bonds became known, and everybody of the bonds became known, and everyoody looked at everybody else for an explanation of what nobody could explain. The police were notified of the occurrence, when detectives Pailips Farley and Joseph Eustace were ordered to "work up" the case. So far, notwithstanding their strenuous efforts to reach the guilty party, they have been unsuccessful in getting hold they have been unsuccessful in getting hold of the wanting man; but they discovered, however, during their investigation that one of however, during their investigation that one of the clerks employed by Messrs. Cambreleng & Pyne has not as yet put in his New Year's ap-pearance. He is said to be a young man of excel-lent character, and, it might be said, almost above suspicion, were it not that his absence cannot be accounted for by those who ought to be able to know something about it. Efforts have been made to find him, but so far without success as is said to have attended the king in his efforts to find out how the apples got into the

OUTRAGE IN LOUISIANA.

Mewspaper Office Destroyed by Democrats.

The New Orleans Republican of December 31st,

The New Orleans Republican of December 31st, contains fuller particulars of an outrage which has already been announced by telegraph. "We have received a despatch from Amos S. Collins, clerk of the Seventh Judicial District Court, stating that the press and printing materials of the Markaville Ragister were yesterday completely destroyed by a mob led by the editors of the Democratic paper published in that place. The Register was conducted as a Republican paper and published the judicial advertisements of Avoyelles parish, and this publication probably led to its lawless suppression by the pariles interested in the Democratic paper at Markaville.

This is the sixth Republican printing establishment that has been destroyed in this State by mobs, acting mainly in the interest of Democratic newspaper publishers, who resort to this desperate means to eccure for themselves a monopoly of judicial advertising. The State authorities should strip these Democratic publishers of every legal advertisement obtained by such lawless acts. These men should be taught that the whole power of the State and Nathonal Governments will be brought to bear to sustain the freedom of the press in Louisiana. The other Republican newspaper establishments that have been destroyed in this State by mobs are Blackburn's Homer Ilical (twice destroyed), the St. Landry Pragress, the Attakapas Register, and the Rapides Tribuna.

It is about time that the whole people of Louisiana should leare that lawlessness and violence will not be tolerated by law, even if it escapes publishment.

The State authorities should prohibit the publication of indicial advertisements.

The State authorities should prohibit the pub-lication of judicial advertisements in the Ope-lousus Courier, the Alexandria Democrat, the Franklin Banner and the Democratic paper at Markeylle. In all these parishes suspend the courts, if necessary, with there can no some ade quate protection to the Republican press.
