THE YOUNG MENNERCHOR'S BALL .-- The Bunual masked ball of the Young Mannerchor came off last night at the Academy of Music, and a more brilliant spectacle has rarely been seen in that brilliant spectacle has rarely been seen in that handsome edifice. Early in the evening people tegan to flock into the building, and by nine o'clock every available seat in the parquette circle and balcony was occupied. The ladies were all richly and elegantly attired, and the scene from the front of the house was very pretty. There were two orchestras, conducted by Messrs. W. G. Dietrich and Theo. Hermanns, and during the entire progress of the ball there was not the elightest intermission in the music.

Atout half-past nine o'clock the curtain rolled up and revealed a magnificent scene. The entire stage was filled with people wearing innumerable kinds of costumes. At the rear of the stage was a large American eagle perched upon a rock. The Master of Ceremonies, drossed as General Boum, headed the procession which was formed on one side of the stage. Stretched along nearly the entire length of the floor, on each side, were large detachments of companies B and I, Gray Reserves, commanded by Captains Rosewig and Oadwallader. Across the stage were the members of the committee of arrangements, dressed in a Swedish costume of the time of Gustavus Adolphus and presenting a very fine appearance. In the rear of them were fifteen or twenty Roman soldiers. Scattered about the stage were the maskers.

The proceedings opened with a trial of skill between the Roman soldiers, who were armed with broad-swords and shields. Then Prince Carnival (Mr. Albedyll) came in on his chariot, which was drawn by clowns. He took his place in the pro-tween the Roman soldiers, who were armed with broad-ewords and shields. Then Prince Carnival (Mr. Albedyll) came in on his chariot, which was drawn by clowns. He took his place in the procession, and then the line moved. In the procession were Romans; a good representation of Queen Isabella of Spain, surrounded by Spanish Dons carrying placards inscribed, "Adieu, Madrid;" a haif-dosen miserable-looking fellows carrying a banner bearing, "Philadelphia Ku-Kiux Guard;" several men with the coat-of-arms of Delaware, representing the whipping post; a huge negro woman, with the Grecian bend; Tamblere, Ghosts, Clowns, Lord Dundrearys, Apes, Monkeys, Prussian Huzzars, American soldiers and Naval Officers, Bishops, Quakers and Quakeresses, Queens, Countesses, Nuns, Peasant girls, country squires, and country, lasses, Highlanders, and, in fact, every form of character imaginable. The procession passed around the stage several times. Prince Carnival supported his honors with dignity, and gracefully kissed his hand to the audience as he was drawn about. The dresses of all the ladies and gentlemen who participated in the parade were all in the best style, and many were of a rich and costly character.

A feature of the procession, which created much merriment was a large coffee pot, from which there were distributed freely well got-up burlesque naturalization papers, declaring "that at the Inferior Court for the Masquerade Ball of the Young Mannerchor, of the City of Philadelphia," the holder was admitted "to become a fool and a subject of Prince Carnival."

A few of the couples which we noticed waitzing together were a Harlequin and a Negress, a Bishop and a Quakeress, a Hinssar and a Roman Matron, a Warming-Pan and a Sunflower. The supper department was excellently managed by Mr. Adolph Proskauer.

Everything connected with the affair passed off in the most successful and agreeable manner, and those who participated will remember with great pleasure the event of last night.
