EVENING BULLETIN.

Saturday, January 9, 1869. PENNSYLVANIA AND NEW YORK. The two States of Pennsylvania and New York present some differences in their manner and rate of growth that are remarkable when it is considered that they are contiguous, and, many respects, under like conditions of soil and climate. The city of New York grows rapidly in population, but the State loes not. In Pennsylvania the growth of the chief city is very rapid, but that of the rest of the State is nearly if not quite as rapid. The State of New York loses more than Pennsylvania does by emigration of its sons the Western States, while the city of New York gains more by immigration of Europeans than Philadelphia does. Altogether the annual net average gain, in numbers, wealth and intelligence, is greater in Pennsylvania than it is in New York.

The relative progress of the two States i wealth may be illustrated by their financial condition now, as compared with what it used to be. Fifteen years ago, in the year 1854, the debt of Pennsylvania was $41,869, 1995; that of New York was only $24,288, 568. Now the net debt of Pennsylvania, allowing a fair price for the railroad bonds she owns, is about $25,000,000; the net debt of New York, as just reported by Governor sition of the two States is almost exactly re versed from what it was fifteen years ago. The fact that Pennsylvania has reduced he debt about forty per cent., while New York has increased hers about sixty per cent., is a striking proof of the extraordinary develop ment of the wealth of our State as compared with that of our neighbor.

THE POST OFFICE FRAUDS.

The heavy public debts of New York and Pennsylvania were created by the construction of the canals intended to facilitate com merce between the East and the West, Tae New York canal, from the Hudson to Lak Erie, first gave New York the supremacy over the other Eastern seaports. The canal system of that State has been profitable to the Treasury, and is so even now, with traffic. The Pennsylvania canals, when owned by the State, never were profitable; but they served, under successive Democratic administrations, to enrich hundreds of politicians, and the contractors favored by them. It was a happy thing for Pennsylvania when dated the decline of the huge public debt. office, reported to be nearly forty-two mil-

These not only give work for young energies, but they open, into other branches of employment, and offer so cerely hope Congress will heed the suggestion its principles, we believe the other nations much to be done in the way of profitable labor, that young Pennsylvanians need not heave their native State in search of good openings for business.
