any degree responsible for the disloyalty of her neighbors.

Mr. Conkiling asked whether, if Miss Murphy's claim rested on the ground that she was a citizen of the United States whose property, having been taken for public use, should be paid for, the fact of her leyalty increased her citizenship or made her claim stronger than the claim of a citizen who had not been loyal.

Mr. Hendricks declined to discuss the merits of any other claim the one before the Senate. The fidelity of the claimant in this case to her Government had never been questioned, and of any other claim than the one before the Senate. The fidelity of the claimant in this case to her Government had never been questioned, and although, therefore, the obligation of the Government to pay for her property taken for public use, yet the obligation might be questioned in the case of a person who had taken part in the insurrection. The people, although they had to pay for many things that they—ought never to pay for, were yet able to pay every citizen of the country which had previously been proclaimed by the President to be in a state of insurrection.

Mr. Howe remarked that what the President in his proclamation had said, was not that Alabama was in insurrection, but there was an insurrection.

Mr. Conkling said he had convinced himsel that would be likely to come up this session, and to the finances of the government than any other that would be likely to come up this session, and he thought that if the object of the Senate was to make the war odious, and to dispose of its own intelligence and integrity, the object could be attained by passing the bill. In 1864, when her property was destroyed, the claimant was a citizen of Alabama, a State that was then in insurrection.

Mr. Conkling said that he had once heard a serior of the commission, and the commission itself would have no appointing power. The President would have no appointing power. The ridiculed the late of the bill creating an aristocracy, showing that the applicants for examination for office would not be persons nominated by members of Congress or local politicians, but persons prosenting themselves from all walks of life. The ther property was destroyed, the claimant was a citizen of Alabama, a State that was then in insurrection.

Mr. Conkling said that he had once heard a judge say that a contract for the sale of a horse applied to his head, his tail, and the whole of him, and by a parity of reasoning he supposed that when a State or a country, or an entire geographical thing, was named, the whole of it was named.

Mr. Howe asked him whether, if a newspaper parsgraph should state that the small-pox had broken out in the State of New York, it must be understood that it prevailed throughout the whole State; if not, whether an insurrection might not break out in a State without involving the whole State.

Mr. Conkling supposed this question to be meant for a pleasantry, and thought that as such it must have some merits, because it made the Senator from Indiana (Mr. Hendricks) laugh. He repeated that the President's proclamation, with the force given to it by the decisions of the Supreme Count, had the effect of making the whole of the Senate, but that that the citizen of the Senate, but that that the such preme count, had the effect of making the whole of the Senate, but that that the citizen of the Senate, but that that the such preme count, had the effect of making the whole of it would not be persons nominated by members of Congress or local politicians, but persons of local politicians, but perso the force given to it by the decisions of the Supreme Conrt, had the effect of making the whole of the State of Alabama enemies' territory, and no valid claim could be made for property destroyed in that territory, and the loyalty or disloyalty of the claimant was wholly immaterial, because the Constitutional provision under which the claim was made recognized no such distinction.

Mr. Jenckes replied that there might be some difference of opinion as to whether the Vice President is a member of the bill was of no particular importance. A commission could be appointed without the Vice President being a member of it, though he thought it eminently proper that the Vice President should be, he having no official duty to perform except to preside over the At Fairness might be all it was bline because of of the single of changed and control being a superior with the present of the control being a superior with the superior with the superior with the superior with the present of the superior with the superior with the present of the superior with the superior with the present of the superior with t

Columbia was not and had not been at any proclaimed by the President to be enemies terproclaimed terp Mr. Davis said that the opponents of this bill had opposed it upon the ground that the law of nations, which regulates the rights and liabilities of citizens and subjects of nations, or nations at war with each other, applied to the case of States in rebellion against the Government of the United States, but the answer of Mr. Howard abandoned that ground, because if the law of nations applied here, then Mr. Johnson and Judge Wayne, being citizens of an enemy's country, their property in the District of Columbia or elsewhere would be liable to confiscation. Without acting on the bill the Senate took up and passed a bill for the relief of R. W. Greast and Samuel Phelps, of North Carolina, and then, at 4 P. M., adjourned till Monday.

House.—Mr. Schenck, from the Committee of Ways and Means, reported a bill amending the second section of the law of March 31, 1808, to exempt certain manufacturers from internal taxes, so as to extend its provisions to manufacturers of nayal machinery for the government, and re-arly opportunity to discuss this measure, and rearly opportunity to discuss this measure, and rearly opportunity to discuss this measure, and nouncing, however, that he concurred generally with the views expressed by Mr. Logan. He believed the bill to be a mischievous one, and altower the views expressed by Mr. Boyer and the views expressed by Mr. Boyer adeath being closed, the Military Academy Appropriation bill was considered and ordered to be reported to the House. It appropriates $\frac{1}{1}$ for was passed by the House.

Mr. Miller offered a resolution inquiring of the Public Printer the cause of the delay in furnishing the agricultural report for 1868. Adopted.

The House at twenty minutes to four went into Committee of the whole on the State of the Inion, Mr. Wilson (Pa.) in the chair, on the President's Message of 1868, and was addressed by Mr. Boyer alm a speech on general politics, in reply to a speech made by Mr. Blaine (Me.) before the lowes.

Mr. Boyer admitted that the late Presidential between Mr. Davis said that the opponents of this bill curly opportunity to discuss this measure, an Mr. Boyer admitted that the late Presidential so as to extend its provisions to manufacturers of naval machinery for the government, and remitting such taxes as had not accrued prior to the lat of April, 1868. After a brief explanation by Mr. Schenck, the bill was passed.

On motion of Mr. Washburne (III.), the Naval Appropristion bill was made the special order for Monday next.

Mr. Brooks reserved the right of making points of order on the various sections of the bill.

Mr. Washburne suggested that that right might be reserved and exercised so as to increase the public expenditures.

Mr. Brooks replied that it was very easy to make such an insinuation, but that a member might take up the time of the House in bellowing about economy and then waste ferty times the amount attempted to be saved. about attempted to be saved.

The House, at two o'clock, went into Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union (Mr. Hulburd, of New York, in the chair) on the Militery Academy bill on hour and a half being Military Academy bill, an hour and a half being allowed for general debate.

so as to extend its provisions to manufacturers tion to Mr. Jenckes' civil, service bill, discussing the whole matter, and declaring that he desired the whole matter, and declaring that he desired the business of this government to be discharged with the utmost intelligence, fidelity and despatch, and upon the principles of scrupulous economy, and that the employes shall receive such compensation as will make them proof against dishonesty. He would vote for any practical measure to bring about such a reform, but he was immovably opposed to the establishment of a life tenure in office, a system so opposed to the establishment of a life tenure in office, a system so opposed to the establishment of a life tenure in office, a system so opposed to the establishment of a life tenure in office, a system so opposed to the establishment of a life tenure in office, a system so opposed to the establishment of a life tenure in office, a system so opposed to the ceived from Parmelee & Co., No. 738 Sansom life tenure in office, a system so opposed to the genius and spirit of our institutions, and our people, and regarded with so much apprehension by the debaters on the Constitution. In this connection he alluded to the debates upon giving a life tenure of office to the Judges of the Supreme Court, showing the apprehension then entertained, and that the same danger was as much to be apprehended now as then.

He held that the people are the rulers of the Country, and that their representatives have no right to create a power that is not liable to their decision, which is final and paramount to all other authority. He argued that the appointment of subordinates or the nominations for apother authority. He argued that the appointment of subordinates or the nominations for appointments are just as much a part of the daty of representatives as any other resting upon them, and that a share in those appointments is as much a time honored right of the people as any other they have. Every administration was held responsible for the policy it pursued, and had therefore a right to unanimity in all its departments. He pictured the condition of the government at the breaking out of the rebellion, with all its smaller offices filled by Secessionists of the deepest dye, who communicated to the enemy all the plans of the government, and successfully the surface of important the stream of the contracting of the world in the stream of the contracting the condition of the contracting of the contrac

IODIZED SYRL P'OF HORSE-RADISH.
PREPARED BY GRIMAULT & CO., PARIS.

This syrup contains lodine combined with the juice of water cress, 1 rehe-radish, and seuvy-grass, in which iodine and sulphur exist naturally, and for this reason is an excellent substitute for cod liver oil, which is generally supposed to owe its efficacy to the presence of lodine. The lodized Syrup of Horse-radish invariably producer most satisfactory results administered to children suffering from lymphatism, rachiting, coprestion of the signeds of the neck, or the vario's cruptions on the face so frequent during infancy. It is also the best remedy for the first stage of consumption. Being at once tonic and depurative, it excites the appetite, promotes digestion, and restores to the itsaues their natural firmness and vigor.
