[From the Sonday Transcript, Feb. 7.] "As to whether a Harrison boller will explode is an open question. Its inventor is particular positive on the subject, while others are caually certain the other way. Now it is not for us to say that the Harrison boiler will, and we certainly shall not aver that it will not, explode. may be proper to add that in December last there was an explosion in Drinker's alley. Now what was the name of the exploded boller? Will Mr. Harrison please say? Our columns are open for explanations."

If the boiler in Drinker's alley alluded to is the one in Mr. Yocum's foundry, it is a Harrison boiler, In a pamphlet issued from the Harrison Boiler Works for several years past will be found the following:

Page 21. "Steam-boilers can no more be mad absolutely secure against some kind of explosion or fracture than guns or ordnance. But they should be and can be made, so that no serious harm can arise when they do give way. To accomplish this most important end, the prevailing system has been found, after a century of trial, entirely at fault, and improvements must be looked for in its abandonment.

Axiome, page 23.-1st. That a steam-generator. of whatever form or material, must, as a paramount condition, be absolutely secure from destructive explosion, even when carelessly used. 3d. That its strength should in no respect be dependent upon any system of stays or braces whereby the inefficiency or rupture of one of these braces or stays could cause greatly increased strain upon the others, thus endangering the whole structure. 6th. That a boller, whether of large or small limensions, should have uniformly such ele ments of strength, as would render it always capable of safely sustaining many times greater pressure than need ever be demanded of it in practice, and that its safety should not be impaired by corrosion, or the many other harmfu ntiuences, which so soon and so seriously affect the strength of ordinary boilers.

7th. That the parts should be so made and put together, that in case of rupture of any portion of the boiler, no general break up of the structure could occur, the release of the pressure by such rupture merely causing a discharge of the connts, without explosion or serions disturbance of apy kind.

Page 37 .- "By what has been adduced it must be seen that the Harrison Boller is safe from destructive explosion. It is not, however, main ained that it cannot. under excessive pressure be burst in some of its parts, or that it might not under certain elrcumstances, do injury, conso-quent upon a sudden discharge of water or steam. But it is maintained that under no circumstance can it 'rend and scatter large masses of material liberating at the same time large volumes of highly charged water and steam.'

"On page 131 of the Journal of the Franklin nstitute for February, 1867, will be found a renort of the 'Committee on Science and the Art of the Franklin institute, giving an account of certain most severe tests that the Harrison Boile was put to, in the effort to destroy it by steampressure and other means. The attempted de struction utterly failed. Attention is called to this report, as exhibiting some very remarkable

"When it is considered that eight hundred and seventy-five pounds per square inch of steamressure, failed to burst any of the spheres in one of the sections-that under such severe test every joint becomes a safety-valve; and when it is cen Has Safely from Destructive Explosion: | fain that, under all circumstances, the general integrity of the whole structure can be surely maintained (a point most positively insisted upon), then but slight injury can arise, in any contingency."
