

THE MAGAZINES FOR FEBRUARY.—The best practical article in the Overland is one which investigates the difficulties of the case and its difficulties are fully turned over to the air, and the paper of proposed routes demonstrated, and the facts of the case are set forth in a forceful manner.

THE MAGAZINES FOR MARCH.—The Atlantic—Part Third of Col. Higginson's Oldport Romance, "Malbone," leads off. The elegant column is not exactly a novel, as the current readers in the plot and in the dialogue, but it is a very pleasant essay, and the analysis of the temperament of Emilia, in the ninth chapter, is in a very welcome manner.

NEW YEAR'S CALLS AMONG THE CALIFORNIANS.—Very early in the morning of the New Year, the streets are thronged with the people, carrying the cards of their superiors, with their congratulations to friends who may not be convenient to visit for a few days.

THE OCCIDENT FOR FEBRUARY.—The Occident for February exhibits two good articles, an account from the "Pole" of the South Sea, and the conclusion of an account of the "South-coast," attributed to Montagu D'Urberville, the editor's principal effort, however, and one which he lends his force to, is a rather more highly colored and original one, and is entitled "The Portraits, from private sources, of the various characters of the 'Pole' and the 'South-coast'." It is a very interesting and original work.

THE OCCIDENT FOR MARCH.—The Atlantic—Part Third of Col. Higginson's Oldport Romance, "Malbone," leads off. The elegant column is not exactly a novel, as the current readers in the plot and in the dialogue, but it is a very pleasant essay, and the analysis of the temperament of Emilia, in the ninth chapter, is in a very welcome manner.

THE OCCIDENT FOR APRIL.—The Atlantic—Part Third of Col. Higginson's Oldport Romance, "Malbone," leads off. The elegant column is not exactly a novel, as the current readers in the plot and in the dialogue, but it is a very pleasant essay, and the analysis of the temperament of Emilia, in the ninth chapter, is in a very welcome manner.

THE OCCIDENT FOR MAY.—The Atlantic—Part Third of Col. Higginson's Oldport Romance, "Malbone," leads off. The elegant column is not exactly a novel, as the current readers in the plot and in the dialogue, but it is a very pleasant essay, and the analysis of the temperament of Emilia, in the ninth chapter, is in a very welcome manner.

THE OCCIDENT FOR JUNE.—The Atlantic—Part Third of Col. Higginson's Oldport Romance, "Malbone," leads off. The elegant column is not exactly a novel, as the current readers in the plot and in the dialogue, but it is a very pleasant essay, and the analysis of the temperament of Emilia, in the ninth chapter, is in a very welcome manner.

THE OCCIDENT FOR JULY.—The Atlantic—Part Third of Col. Higginson's Oldport Romance, "Malbone," leads off. The elegant column is not exactly a novel, as the current readers in the plot and in the dialogue, but it is a very pleasant essay, and the analysis of the temperament of Emilia, in the ninth chapter, is in a very welcome manner.

THE OCCIDENT FOR AUGUST.—The Atlantic—Part Third of Col. Higginson's Oldport Romance, "Malbone," leads off. The elegant column is not exactly a novel, as the current readers in the plot and in the dialogue, but it is a very pleasant essay, and the analysis of the temperament of Emilia, in the ninth chapter, is in a very welcome manner.

THE OCCIDENT FOR SEPTEMBER.—The Atlantic—Part Third of Col. Higginson's Oldport Romance, "Malbone," leads off. The elegant column is not exactly a novel, as the current readers in the plot and in the dialogue, but it is a very pleasant essay, and the analysis of the temperament of Emilia, in the ninth chapter, is in a very welcome manner.

THE OCCIDENT FOR OCTOBER.—The Atlantic—Part Third of Col. Higginson's Oldport Romance, "Malbone," leads off. The elegant column is not exactly a novel, as the current readers in the plot and in the dialogue, but it is a very pleasant essay, and the analysis of the temperament of Emilia, in the ninth chapter, is in a very welcome manner.

THE OCCIDENT FOR NOVEMBER.—The Atlantic—Part Third of Col. Higginson's Oldport Romance, "Malbone," leads off. The elegant column is not exactly a novel, as the current readers in the plot and in the dialogue, but it is a very pleasant essay, and the analysis of the temperament of Emilia, in the ninth chapter, is in a very welcome manner.
