WARLIKE RUMORS IN EUROPE. As we enter upon our new era of peace under the administration of President Grant. Europe is filled afresh with rumors of wars and with the noise of the preparations of the great nations for the apprehended conflict. There is no especial reason why there should be a general war; but ever since the magnificent triumph of Prussia in her Austrian campaign, and the enforcement of that policy by which she has absorbed smaller neighboring rincipalities, and, by her leadership in the North German Confederation, obtained the pre-eminence in Europe, it has been understood that there must be a collision, sooner or later, between Prussia and her allies on one side, and France upon the other. Prussian success, and the audacious efforts of Bismarck at aggrandizement, deprived Napoleon of his boasted position as arbiter of Europe; and French pride has been restless under the affront, and has exhibited itself in various directions in a bitter jealousy of Prussia France needs but two things before it will be ready to open the campaign-a powerful ally and a pretext. It has sought the first in different quarters. Napoleon began by making an effort to form a South German Confederation of which Austria should be the head, with Belgium in the second place, while France stood by as an ally. This would have been a dangerous rival to the Prussian conederation; but it failed, because Austria foored Prussian nower, and because the Germans everywhere hated the French. Since then, Napoleon has tried again to seduce Austria into an alliance; and lately, if reports be true, he has made a similar effort with doubtful result in Italy. Until he succeeds in some direction it is likely Napoleon will strive to avoid the contest. Prussia would be a very dangerous enemy for France to cone with single-handed: and there is reason to suppose that if the war once began, the former power would obtain assistance at least to humiliate France and destroy her influence; from Russia, for instance, which is hindered in the East, and from Italy, which is kept out of Rome by French interference. A conflic, t with such mighty nations as fighting against such odds, the issue would this fact, and while he is making ready for the inevitable hour when the war will be precipitated upon him whether he wishes it given to obtain delays, that he may first prolarly-wrought up to the highest pitch of inhatred, procrastination is a difficult matter.

New York Money Market. (From the N. Y. World of to-day.) Mancu 9. -The street was agitated to-day by telegrams from Washington in regard to the Secretary of the Trea-mary inbroglio. The latest phase in the sinair was that for Washington in regard to the Secretary of the Trea-mary inbroglio. The latest phase in the sinair was that for the dy the President, and that Mr. Boutwell's name would be sent to the senate to morrow. The government bond market was quiet but firm throughout the day. The money market was active in the morning at 7 per cent. owing to the senate of the banks to confir the banks as herstofore in accordance with the act of Congress re-centryingsed. Some of the banks, incad of carilying; write "accepted" across the drafts. Home of the banks have been making from $40,000 to $150,000 per anum for many years on their brokers' account, and they are di-cuesing the expediency of organising under the State laws, in order, to 'enable them. to certify checks and tranact business as heretofore. At the close on the basis of 108% to 109% for ordinary bankers' sity day starl-ing bills, and 108% to 109%. for ordinary bankers' sity day starl-mages from 199% to 109%.

of no possible benefit to the community. The only per-sons in danger from this system of certification are the stockholders of the bank, who certainly should have the privilege of managing their affairs as seems best to them. A loss resulting from the failure of the drawer of a cer-tified check to make good his account would not fall upon the note-holders or upon the public, but simply upon the stockholders who entrust the matter of certification to their cashed or some special officer. The present Con-grees would do a good set in immediately repealing the law.

Frees would do a good act in immediately repealing the law. One of the last acts of the Fortleth Congress was to pass the bill to strengthen the public credit. This bill provides for the payment in coin of all obligations of the United States, where other terms of payment are not ex-prezely stipulated, and legalizes contracts payable in coin. These provisions have a special bearing upon the value of such gold sciencifies as the First Morrage Bonds of the United Failroad Company, of which, by con-tract, both principal and interest are payable in gold. The act of Congress, following closely, as it does, the de cision of the Bupreme Court that such contracts are valid and of legal force, will strengthen the popular faith in the security of the Union Pasific bonds. The Congressional declaration that the Government Bonds shall be paid in coin, will so strengthen the public credit that future foams may be made at a rate of interest much less than that new paid, so that after the early re-demption of bonds now outstanding, the yood the on vici-studes of political action, will become the most popular securities in market, being, as they are, a first mortgage upon a large, productive real estate, whose value is largely increased with each succeeding year. Meetre. Painter & Co., and De Havern & Bro., of this eity, receive subscriptions to these bonds and will give any derired information respecting the difficater of railroad or the advantages offered by the bonds, the FORTY-FIRST CONGRESS-First See [SENATE-Continued from Fourth Edition.] Ie therefore moved to refer the bill.

Mr. Thayer opposed the motion, saying the thad already been so much considered by the hat and the country, that a reference of th bill to committee was wholly unnecessary. Mr. Edmunds thought the Senate ought not to be in haste to divest itself of one of its great conwould be of great importance, not only for the present, but for the inture also. Mr. Howard also thought that the measure re-quired careful and cautious deliberation, and did dured cateron and cannot a thior areat, and an noticel willing to surrender this great constitu-tional power of the Senate. Mr. Williams took the same view, saying th bill had passed the House partly under the ope ration of the previous question, and had not re eived proper consideration. The bill was referred to the Committee ca ndiciary, by a vote of 34 to 25. Mr. Williams moved to take up the bill strengthen the public credit, so that it might come up to morrow as unfinished business. Can ied-yeas -, nays 18. The Senate then at 2 P. M. adjourned.
