The Irish Church Question—Disraeli's

Agramment.

London, March 18.—In the House of Commons to-day, the bill for the disestablishment of the Irish Church came up for a second reading.

Mr. Disraeli addressed the House. He commons to day declaring, in the words of Gladstone, that this question was one of the most gigantic which had ever been brought before the House, and its consideration demanded much self-control and mutual forbearance. He proceeded to argue that the connection between Church and State was a necessary one.

The former rendered the State religious, investing its authority with the highest sanction. This scheme was likely to destroy religious freedom and toleration. It was a complete violation of the connection with England.

The mejority of the Irish people were discontent. The land question required settlement of the Church question would be insufficient to quiet their discontent. The details of this echeme were complicated and delinity to be paid as regularly and promptly as dividends. If these engagements were compromised, there could be no security against further spollation. The proposed grant to Maynooth College was directly opposed to the presentle of the bill.

Mr. Disraell deprecated the course of the present government as in antagonism to the owner of the course of the present government as in antagonism to the owner of the course of the present government as in antagonism to the present government as in antagonism to the owner of the course of the present government as in antagonism to the owner of the course of the present government as in antagonism to the present government as in antagonism to the owner of the course of the present government as in antagonism to the owner of the course of the present government as in antagonism to the owner of the course of the present government as in antagonism to the owner of the course of the present government as in antagonism to the owner of the course of the present government as in antagonism to the present government contribution pay.
