Saturday, March 20, 1869. WELCOME LITTLE STRANGERS! Among the recent "distinguished arrivals," none will be hailed with more cordiality than that of the troop of little strangers who have inst come over from England to take charge readers will recollect the beautiful illuminations of the foliage of Philadelphia. One thousand by Miss Jean Lee, illustrating the poem called members of the Passer Domesticus family, -which is, by the way, one of the first families of Great Britain,—came over in the city. The artist's many admirers will now well City of Baltimore, and are to be organized, at once, into a Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Bipeds. Science has exhausted itself upon those pests of society, the measuring worms. It has bored into the trees and for Easter is the first of these Illuminations, and is have been more than a match for it. It has | printed, in red and gold, the noble words of this

It declares of disintegrated antimonial bismuth, the worms will disappear. And the worms take Caps, &c.
On Thursday, March 25, at 10 o'clock, on four their leaves very much as before this handy recipe is applied. Finally, Science turns to her elder sister, Nature, and hopelessly asks :

Who shall rid me of mine adversary? Straightway comes the cheery reply, "I, says the sparrow, With my bow and arrow!"

and the little strangers have arrived. With a wisdom which our City Fathers do not always display, Mr. Councilman Smith. of the Twenty-second Ward, was sent to New York to receive the City's guests. Landed upon a strange shore; exposed to the temptations of our American Sodom; untemptations of our American Sodom; unacquainted with the habits and customs of the natives; ignorant of the position of the enemy whom they have come to attack; and interest wearied with the confinement on ship-board; the little strangers might naturally have been tempted to stray from their proper destinaion, and to annul the street-cleanog contract which they have made with our authorities. It was eminently wise, therefore, that they should be received by Smith, of the Twenty-second Ward. There is just that delicate suggestion of salt about that gentleman which would suffice to prevent the escape of a single one of his insectivorous regiment. Never a sparrow in all the ten hundred but must have felt the all the ten hundred, but must have felt the saline influence upon the tip of his tail, as the famous Smith entered their floating aviary. "It is an ill wind that blows mobody any good," and the arrival of these welcome little strangers has demonstrated that even our Smith has his intervals of usefulness to the community, by virtue of that ery quality which has made the good people f Philadelphia dread him so much.

Harrisburg occurred a few days since. A renonstrance from "an indignant citizen" was presented against the occupation of Penn Squares by institutions of learning. This indignant citizen appeared to be ashamed of is proceeding, for neither his name nor that of any one else was attached to the paper, which was, in fact, an anonymous document. Consequently, the Legislature disposed of it by directing that it should be laid under the table. This matter of the appropriation of Penn Squares for educational institutions has now been for some time before the Legislature. There is no open opposition-in fact this indignant and nameless citizen represents the opposition pretty fairly, and it is time that the matter should be formally acted upon An old ordinance, which has not been strictly enforced, has been promulgated anew by the Chief of Police, with orders for its rigid enforcement. It forbids the driving of "a carriage of any kind" on the paved foot-ways at any time, and the use of wheelbar rows and hand-carts on them after 8 A. M The first clause is to be made to include velocipedes, which are nuisances, when they are used on the sidewalks, as they have been lately in some of our most crowded streets. There is room enough for the daring riders of the untamed bycicle in the Park and in the rural districts. But they are intolerable on the sidewalks.

Application has been made to the Legislature for a charter of a Railroad to be called | THE GREAT REPORTS the "Chestnut Hill and Wissahickon Railroad," running from Grover's Lane Station, on the Chestnut Hill Railroad, to Megarge's Mills, on the Wissahickon. We call attention to the fact in order that those interested may be aware of the movement on foot. The road is intended to carry freight, and we suppose, without knowing positively, that it will be a steam road. The bill was intro-

The demand has materially fallen off, and is readily intat the usual sources of supply. The outside market continues to accommodate a large pertion of the borrowers with all the funds they want, whilst the banks continue their usual reserve and caution even towards regular customers. The prospect of an easy market as
