CHAPTER II.

A CURIOUS AND STARTLING MYSTERY!

Skirting the Black Hills, forty miles west of Fort Laramie, a party of horsemen were riding eastward.

They left Fort Bridger eight days before, taking the route of the North Pistte, and were now following the Oregon emigrant road, among those long ridges, dry beds of rivers and sterile plains, by which the region of the Black Hills is distinguished.

The bulk of the party consisted of ten cavalrymen,
under a licutenant, who were returning to Fort Laramie, their post of duty. They were well mounted, and had several led horses in their train, loaded with their provisions and appurtenances of travel.

The balance of the party comprised three civilians,
who had seized the opportunity of crossing the mountains under military escort. Two of these were emigrants who had settled near Fort Bridger, but who had tired of the great solitude, or been frightened by the Indians, and were now returning eastward in search of homes nearer the haunts of civilization. CHAPTER II.

"What do you say to an hour's sport, Mr. Earle?" should the lieutentant, as he bore down mon his friend, for Huburt was a decided favorite with every member of the party.

"I think it would be a downright shame to turn our backs on such splendid game," was the quick response. Who could eat a dinner of salt pork with those fat buffsloes so near us?"

The lieutenant smiled, glanced up and down the line, reading cager longing in the faces of his men, and resolved to carry out his own and the general desire.

At a word of command from him, the party set out at a quick gallop for the scene of action.

The buffaloes allowed the enemy to approach quite near, the wind favoring the hunters; but at length began to snnff the air uneasily, to shake their heads and to look for the cause of their apprehensions.

A moment later they had beheld the enemy, and with trightful bellowings send mighty tramp, bad began their wild, mad flight to the southward.

The chase was a long one; and it was not till the hunters had run the buffaloes upon a spur of the Black Hills that they got a good chance at them They then brought down several plump_young butfalces, and oinner speedly became the watchword.

James Hamilton writes to Governor Morris, in 1755, of trouble from the Indians.—Brodhead was stoutly defended by his sons and others till the Indians thought if to retire, without being able to take it or set it on fire, though they frequently attempted in the attacks, but that is not known with certainty." In 1757 Major Parons writes to Governor Denny of more troable and fears of an attack upon the Minisinks, and that a large body of Indians had attacked and burned Brodhead's house, which is about a mile from and in sight of fort Hamilton, and that they had killed and scalped one Tidd, besides killing a great number of creatures.
