THE LAST HORBOR.

There is never a repetition of the horrible deeds of blood which, from time to time, convulse this community, without a repetition, also, of the demonstration of the inefficiency of the present police system. The dreadful ragedy which came to light yesterday aftermother and children have been swept into eternity, is one of the most shocking and sick-ening hortors ever recorded in Philadelphia. A young man of respectable connections, of good habits, established in business, living in his own quiet home, with wife and children, under a sudden access of insanity, butchers noon, in which a whole femily, father, ber; and it is well for the public good that je3-1y4p his faithful wife and his loving children, with a fearful deliberation; which, of itself, proves the community. If this cannot be done, perterrible tragedy with suicide. The horror is one, which appears to have in it no element of crime. The whole con-duct of Mr. Blackstone is that of a cool, de-cent. The principal objection to this method the next thing would be, as a contemporary has suggested, to abolish the Legislature altogether, and decide for or against proposed measures by tossing up a cent.
