THE PAFETY OF VALUABLES. The hold robbery of the Beneficial Savings Fond, yesterday, falling as it does, partially upon a large number of poor depositors, has elicited much sympathy for those who can ill afford to lose their hard-earned savings. It is gratifying to know that the great bulk of the stolen bonds are registered, and will be meless to the robbers ; but, unless the police are particularly successful, there will still be a heavy loss to the Institution. Past experience warrants the bener that, under the turpitude of their rascalities. Murderesses Peremptory Sales by order of the O those mysterious processes which have at- l tended nearly all the great bond robberies, the stolen property will be spirited back, and the poor depositors will be made safe again. The plunder is not of a very easily negotiable description, and we believe that it will come the successful robbers will go on their way any thirst for human blood. No decent man back to the vaults of the Saving Fund, while

But however this may be, there is an important practical suggestion growing out of uch a robbery, which should not pass unbeeded. Here was an institution which had taken what were believed to be ample precautions to protect its depositors, and which were greatly superior to those in use in many stablishments. The building was guarded by a watchman and the safe was of an approved construction and very strongly secured. And yet, there was a time when the watchmap was not on duty, and that time was ascertained. Carefully prepared was ascertained. Carefully prepared was ascertained. Carefully prepared machinery was brought to bear upon the safe, and it was opened and rifled of within the extreme penalties of the law. its contents.
