The debate was further continued by Measrs.
Dawes, Voorhees, Marshall, Jones (Ky.) and Schenck. Mr. Schenck, answering the arguments of Measrs. Logan and Butler, remarked that some people make their charges openly, while some people make their charges openly, while on the contrary has daily enlarged its active boundaries and more scrously imperiled the Spanish rule. The Provisional Government of Cuba is at this moment master of at least three-diffuse of the entire area of the island; it commends all the interior lines of communication within this revolutionized territory; it threatens others inclinate lies, and thus add cowardice to others insinuate lies, and thus add cowardics to insulf.

Mr. Logan asked Mr. Schenck whether he alluded to him, in speaking of those who insinuate lies, and thus add insult to falsehood.

Mr. Schenck—No, eir.

Mr. Butler—I ask the gentieman whether the Pharisee did not say, "I thank God that I am not like other men."

Mr. Schenck—I think it very probable. A nything that hypocrisy may have uttered will be familiar to the gentieman in whatever form it may come.

The disconsisting of those who inside the from the control of the Spaniards over the remaining squinst them chiefly to the sea-board and to the walls of a few principal towns; it mas an organized semi-military Government whose authority is readily and seriously respected by the people; it has to day an army of over 40,000 men in the field, and could easily double that number if in possession of arms and proper equipments. So much the Revolution has practically accomplished. It has in reality done much more, for from the outset it has established the policy of from the outset it has established the policy of from the outset it has established the policy of from the outset it has established the policy of from the outset it has established the policy of from the outset it has established the policy of from the outset it has established the policy of from the outset it has established the policy of from the outset it has established the policy of from the outset it has confined the troops over the remaining the control of the Spaniards ove

House, Mr. McGinnis moved that the Schate bill 231, known as the Philadelphia Cattle bill, be put pon the private calendar of next week.

Mr. K.eckner objected. Mr. K.eckner objected.

Resolutions being in order, Mr. McGinnis then presented his motion in the enape of a resolution.

Mr. Kleckner raised a point of order, which was sustained, that it would require a two-thirds vite to adopt the resolution, the bill having been reported with a negative recommendation. A viva voce vote was taken, when the resolution was defeated by a decided majority. The Senate resolution relative to the final adjournment of the Legislature next Thursday was referred to the Committee on Ways and Means.

The House adjourned until Monday afternoon, at o'clock.
